How One Woman Lost 102 Pounds of Fat

Almost unbelievable—nevertheless true

Dear Friends:
You advertise Kruschen Salts for reducing, so I finally tried them, and when I started I weighed 15 stone 9 lbs., and when I took them for a year and 3 weeks I lost exactly 102lbs. I am 23 years old and I look at least 5 years younger now than I did when I was fat. I have a picture of myself before and after, so if you want to see them let me know.
I took 2 bottles every month for a year and 3 weeks for reducing 102lbs., but it was worth it. If I can be of any help to you let me know.

Yours truly,
(Miss) Nellie Simpson.

The Safe way to lose fat

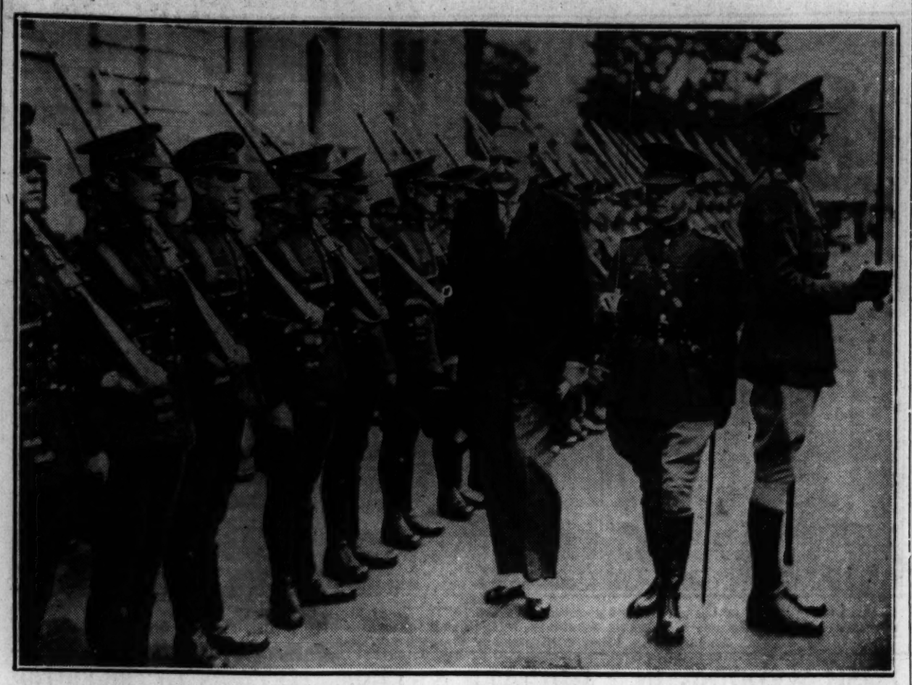
A fashionably slender figure as well as glorious, magnetic health can now be yours! Just take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast.

Unlike other Salts, Kruschen doesn't reduce by rushing food through your system. Rather it's an ideal blend of 6 separate mineral salts which help every gland, nerve and body organ to function properly.

Women everywhere are overjoyed with this marvellous reducing treatment. Frequently pound by pound of surplus fat leaves and soon you possess that trim, bewitchingly slender figure you've always craved.

A 1/9 bottle of Kruschen (lasts 4 weeks) is sold by all chemists—so start this SAFE method to lose ugly fat TO-DAY!

COMMERCIAL TREATY WITH FRANCE.



The French Minister, M. Alphand, inspecting the guard of honour outside Government Buildings, Dublin, yesterday, on the occasion of the signing of the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation between France and the Irish Free State. Mr. McGilligan, Minister for External Affairs, signed on behalf of the Free State.

ERASMUS SMITH TRUSTS.

WHY THE GOVERNORS CAME TO COURT.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE MEREDITH.)

Why the Governors of the Erasmus Smith Schools brought to court their action against the Attorney-General of the Irish Free State and a number of "special defendants" was explained during the continued argument on the preliminary issue in the case, which is whether the paramount object of the trusts created by Erasmus Smith is religious or educational.

Mr. Jellett, K.C.; Mr. Overend, K.C.; Mr. Kingsmill Moore, and Mr. T. U. O'Dell (instructed by Messrs. Darley, Orpen and Synnott) appeared for the plaintiffs; Mr. McCann, K.C.; Mr. Rice, K.C., and Mr. McGuckin (instructed by Messrs. O'Hanlon and Robinson) for the Attorney-General; Mr. Lavery, K.C.; Mr. Gavan Duffy, K.C.; Mr. E. J. Kelly, K.C., and Mr. John Hooper (instructed by Messrs. Sheridan and Kenny) for the Roman Catholic "special defendants"; and Mr. Dickie, K.C.; Mr. Charles C. Campbell and Mr. W. Hamill (instructed by Messrs. Dickie, Coulter and Hamill) for the Presbyterian "special defendants."

DIFFERENT VIEWS.

When Mr. Jellett was about to resume his argument on behalf of the plaintiffs that the paramount object of the trusts was religious,

Mr. Justice Meredith asked had Mr. Dickie's defence been delivered.

Mr. Jellett replied that it had, but that it did not arise on the preliminary issue that was now before the Court.

Mr. Justice Meredith said that he had spent the week-end looking over matters in relation to the case. He had already decided that Mr. Dickie had a right to be there, even on the preliminary issue alone, and he could not see how Mr. Jellett could avoid certain aspects of it that would be very material to Mr. Dickie's point of view. Mr. Jellett, from the point of view put before him, did not mind whether his lordship took the original foundation deed as fundamental, or started from the charter, but his lordship was not at all sure that Mr. Dickie might not take the view that it was very material to him whether he started from the foundation deed or from the charter, and, if his lordship took one particular view that was entirely hostile to Mr. Dickie, then Mr. Dickie would be knocked out before he entered the ring, so to speak. His lordship had been going over Mr. Jellett's opening statement, which was a masterpiece of clearness, and he saw quite clearly that there were different views that had not been argued in this preliminary issue, and he thought that there were points on which Mr. Dickie might legitimately ask leave to cross-examine, without embarrassing Mr. Jellett, and that his richts must be saved.

PROVISIONS OF THE DEED.

Mr. Dickie said that that was exactly the position he took up. He did not want to embarrass anyone, but to save his rights.

Mr. Justice Meredith, referring to the different views that might be taken, said that one was that the charity was a predominantly Protestant charity, but only if it was a Church of Ireland charity.

Mr. Jellett—I am not asking to have it declared an exclusively Church of Ireland charity.

Mr. Dickie said that the position which he had taken up from the beginning was that he wanted to be present when Mr. Jellett was making his case.

Mr. Jellett then referred to the Statute of George I., which, he said, was obtained on the petition of the governors of the trust, and to the mandatory provisions of the deed.

Mr. Justice Meredith asked why, if the governors were complying with all the mandatory provisions of the deed, were they in Court at all.

Mr. Jellett—We are here because the argument is put forward by the defendants in their defence and counter-claim that the paramount object of the trusts was secular education, and that religious education was only secondary.

Mr. Justice Meredith—Is not that a point that arises only if it is impossible to comply with all those conditions, and if it becomes necessary to apply the charity cy pres?

Mr. Jellett—That is not the view of my friends. My friends, as they are entitled to do, take the documents that I have opened and say that, according to those documents, the paramount object is secular education, and because you have been bringing this religious education into it you have been committing a breach of trust.

SCHOOL RAIDED.

Answering Mr. Justice Meredith, Mr. Jellett said that the Erasmus Smith Schools existed, with the exception of one in Tipperary which had been raided during the troubled times, and in which two or three thousand pounds worth of damage had been done. Provision for pupils of that school, however, had been made in the Bishop Foy School, Waterford.

His lordship, added Mr. Jellett, had asked why the Governors were there at all, and he would tell him. The Governors came to the Government and asked what about Tipperary? This question was raised in the Dail, and a bill was introduced, and then the whole issue was started whether this was a Protestant charity at all or not. The bill was introduced by the Governors with the object, he thought, of getting some modification of their powers, and they were approached by the Government and told that if they brought an action to settle this question and have their legal position clearly defined—whether it was religious or whether it was not—then the Government would not interfere by legislation. "We gave that undertaking," said Mr. Jellett, "and in pursuance of that undertaking we brought this action."

Mr. Justice Meredith—Then am not I right in saying you come in for modification?

Mr. Jellett—Some small thing; not a modification or alteration of the trust.

Pursuing his argument, Mr. Jellett referred to a number of statutes in support of his contention, and read the conclusions at which commissions of inquiry had arrived regarding the intentions of Erasmus Smith.

There was statutory recognition of the Protestant character of the endowment, continued Mr. Jellett, and the Erasmus Smith Schools were expressly excluded from the operations of the purview of the Commissioners of Education by the Endowed Schools Act because they had this exclusively religious foundation.

Mr. Jellett had not concluded his opening statement when the Court adjourned until to-day.

DUBLIN DISTRICT COURT.

SCENES NEAR PRISON GATES.

REMANDED MEN BOUND OVER.

(BEFORE MR. HANNAN.)

John Dunne (36), a carrier, of King's Inn street, and Joseph Conlan (16½), a clerk, of Oscar square,, appeared on remand, charged with being guilty of disorderly conduct and with assaulting members of the Civic Guard on the North Circular road, near Mountjoy Prison, on the night of the 18th inst.

The case of Conlan was taken first.

Sergeant E 21 said that he saw the defendant near Mountjoy Prison on the night in question, Conlan was standing on a lorry with a chair in his hand, and was booking and hissing. He took the chair from him, and lifted him off the lorry. Conlan could not have accidentally struck a Guard while he was taking him off the lorry.

OBJECTION TO EVIDENCE.

Mrs. Maud Gonne McBride entered the witness box to give evidence on behalf of the defendant. She said that she was not present at the meeting, but had invited the committee to ask as many young boys and girls as they could find to carry their posters—posters which had been carried through the streets by herself and members of the committee.

Mr. C. Casey, who prosecuted for the State, objected on the ground that Mrs. McBride's evidence was not relevant, as she had stated she was not at the meeting.

The witness asked whether a meeting was illegal if it had not been so ordered twenty-four hours before it took place.

Mr. Casey objected to Mrs. McBride getting any information, as she "had her lawyers on the platform, and they could keep her right on points of law."

The Justice said that a matter might be perfectly legal up to a certain point.

Mrs. McBride—The boy carried his poster until he was pulled off the lorry.

ALLEGATION OF TORTURING.

Madame Czira ("John Brennan") then gave evidence. When the procession reached Mountjoy, she said, there was some cheering. She saw a scuffle and a policeman swinging a chair. Superintendent O'Connell was appealed to, but he did nothing.

The witness went on to say that later she saw a boy, who might be the youth in the dock, being tortured by a guard. The Guard continued to torture the boy until he dropped from sheer exhaustion.

To Mr. Casey—I heard Mr. Fitzpatrick speak in Cathal Brugha street, but I did not hear the whole of his speech. The boy did nothing that would justify his torture. "I would not say there was a thousand people there. Before the occurrence I had never seen the defendant."

The defendant, in the course of his evidence, said that he went on the lorry to Berkeley road, where he saw a baton charge by the police. When he was being pulled off the lorry he fell, and in falling he struck Guard 221 C in the chest. He did nothing deliberately, and was arrested for it. (Laughter).

To Mr. Casey—I was never in Court before. I do not say that I was the most peaceful citizen at Mountjoy that evening. I shouted and hissed and booed because the rest were doing the same. I will not answer your question as to whether I am a member of the F. F. Boy Scouts. I do not remember if I fainted last Thursday evening.

MAN REMOVED FROM COURT.

At this point a man in the gallery who made a protest was forcibly removed.

Mr. Casey—Did you hear Mr. Lynn speak to Superintendent O'Connell?

The defendant—No.

Mr. Casey—Did you resist arrest?

The defendant—Under the circumstances I did.

The Justice—What circumstances?

Conlan—Because my arms were twisted.

Mr. Casey, in closing the prosecution, urged that the evidence of Madame Czira and the defendant might be coloured because of the circumtances which then obtained.

The Justice said that he was satisfied that Madame Czira was mistaken respecting the defendant. On the previous day the defendant made no suggestion as to the alleged cruel treatment by the Guards or a Guard. In the dock and witness box the defendant looked a boy of intelligence and incentive, who knew the value of evidence. His action before the court proved that the question for the court was: Did the defendant deliberately assault Guard 221 C? He had admitted shouting, hooting and hissing and making himself conspicuous on that occasion. He (the Justice) was satisfied that the defendant assaulted the Guard, and he convicted.

DEFENDANTS BOUND OVER.

Mr. Casey said that the authorities would be satisfied if the defendant was bound over.

The defendant's father said that he never had any trouble with him.

The Justice—What do you work at? I will not explain that.

The defendant was bound over under the Probation Act for twelve months.

In the case against Dunne no further evidence was tendered.

Superintendent Long said that Dunne was an honest, industrious man.

The Justice bound the defendant over, and discharged him under the Probation of Offenders Act.

IRISHMAN'S DIARY.

The Devil in the Potato-Patch : "Felons of Our Land." The New Moon : Dragonetti's Dolls : "Hikers." Crowded Compartments.

The Potato Sprayer.

The Free State Ministry of Agriculture's instructions to farmers to watch and spray their potato crops, if they wish to avoid the consequences of blight, remind me that it is but recently that the small-holders of the remoter parts have been willing to lend an ear at all to instruction. As with the Roman, so with them, the cult of the mos majorum had something of the sanction of religion about it. What one's grandfather did not do was probably something diabolical.

I can well recall the first appearance of spraying apparatus in a western townland. The progressive operator had risen early, and departed to his kitchen garden under the apprehensive eyes of his wife and numerous children. It was clear from their expression that they doubted what the day might bring. Neighbours, who had heard betimes of the imminence of the great experiment, were already on the scene, gradually disclosing their shapes by hedge and bole and ditch. Much awed comment passed upon the mere outward guise of the man with the spray tank on his back, and, indeed, he might have been a proto-monster, precursor of the shapes we know that rush on gas or descend to watery depths.

He sprayed, and soon beneath the wind and sun both sprayer and potato crop took on the sinister tint of powdered blue. The combination of his attire with the unexpected colouration was more than those mountainy men could stomach. With myriad yell and invocation they fled away to tell how the devil was come upon the potatoes. They were wrong. If anything, he had just been driven out.

"Felons of Our Land."

I have received the following request from Major J. J. Power, of the 2nd Battalion Oxford and Buckingham Light Infantry, stationed in Burma. Perhaps, some of my readers could satisfy it :—

"About eighteen months ago there appeared in the Irishman's Diary under the heading mentioned above an account of a lecture on regimental marches broadcasted by the British Broadcasting Company.

"Your correspondent at the time said that when the title of the regimental march of our second battalion was announced, 'The Lower Castle Yard,' his thoughts naturally turned to the Lower Castle Yard of Dublin. Then to his amazement the band struck up the tune of an old song entitled 'The Felons of our Land,' or 'A Felon's cap's the proudest crown an Irishman can wear.'

"How this song became our regimental march is shrouded in the past.

"Could any of your readers help me in obtaining the words of the song, and at the same time give me any clue as to how the song came to be connected with my regiment?"

Crowd Psychology.

In the course of a stroll at a late hour on Sunday evening I halted at Blackrock Station to watch the seaside trippers returning homewards. Large numbers awaited every train, and, as I watched, it occurred to me that it was strange how these normally intelligent people became bereft of their wits in moments of stress. The arrival of a train in the station was the signal for pandemonium to break loose. With much calling and shouting the people rushed up and down the length of the train, trying to enter locked "firsts" or already overcrowded "thirds," and completely ignoring the porters' invitations to enter compartments which had some vacant seats. Owing to the frequent service, trains could not be delayed unduly, and on several occasions they departed, leaving behind most of the waiting passengers. Repetition soon led to frayed tempers; children grew fretful, their parents got cross; smacks and cuffs were distributed liberally, and in some cases impartially, leading to friction among the adults.

I came away marvelling at the feeling beneath it all when I heard one woman, with a quartette of petulant children, remark to a neighbour, "I love coming home like this in the cool of the evening."

Advice to "Hikers."

I have been amused at some of the "tips" given to English "hikers." City-dwellers who go on these expeditions are advised by one authority to be careful when crossing fields where horses and cattle are grazing. Horses, they are told, will probably come running up to them, but only in a harmless way, and no danger need be feared if the "hikers" take care to keep in front of the animals, who never kick forwards. Cattle, especially young ones, are full of curiosity, but can easily be dispersed by the clapping of hands, or by pronouncing the words "shoo-shoo." They should not, however, be threatened, as they are liable to charge in self-defence. Bulls should be carefully avoided; they may be recognised by their size, their shagginess, and the fact that there is usually only one bull by himself in a field.

No advice is proffered on the proper way to deal with rams, turkey cocks and ganders. This is an unfortunate omission; for an ambush by either of the latter two barnyard terrors might prove disconcerting to people clad in "shorts." I notice that one humorist, who had apparently been reading some of this literature, suggested that the inexperienced "hiker," when tempted to take a nap in a convenient field, should be careful to keep his mouth shut in case a cuckoo should come along and lay an egg in it.

Uneasy Lies the Head.

I have seen in the windows of hatters some few examplars of the latest in hats—the hat for men, in bright colours. Hats brick red, saxe blue, and vivid green had caught my eye, and had sent my mind speculating in wild directions. I had even hesitated upon the threshold of these hatters, only, at second thoughts, to turn aside—the craven victim of the conventions.

Yet, I know not what excess I would not at last have perpetrated had I not heard what I did hear. I was standing near an hotel entrance in company with a knot of people, including two workmen, in whom I instinctively recognised the elusive "man in the street." To us there emerged from the hotel a rotund little man, complete with cane and, yes, a soft hat of strawberry hue.

"Will yous look at that now?" said one of the workmen to the other. "What is it he has at all?"

"Speak aisy, Pat," replied his friend. "The poor feller, sure the dhrink's afther risin' in his head."

Colours and Moods.

It has long been maintained that colours have a marked effect and influence on certain people, and I see that a scientific study of the matter has just confirmed the belief. An American scientist has been describing the progress made, and, as a result, it is now possible to indicate the moods associated with various colours according to the following table :—

Red: Exciting, passionate.
Orange: Warm, flowing, lively.
Yellow: Joyous, gay, merry.
Yellow-green: Cheerful.
Green: Neutral, tranquil.
Blue-green: Sober, sedate.
Blue: Cold, tranquil, serene.
Violet: Solemn, melancholy, depressed.
Purple: Stately, pompous, impressive.

The development suggests the interesting possibility that soon we may be able to "fit the colour to the mood" for any occasion, while, incidentally, it indicates the libel from which one tint, at least, has suffered by having been unjustly associated with the "blues."

Taking Care of the Dimes.

The old saying that, if one takes care of the pence, the pounds will take care of themselves, is applied in the United States to dimes. There are ten dimes to a dollar, and the saying runs there: "Take care of the dimes and the dollars mind themselves." Americans take this saying very seriously, according to a story which I heard from an American friend. It illustrates the determination and singleness of purpose which seem to inspire the youth of U.S.A. in all its doings.

A young man, on leaving school and starting life in an office, decided to save all his dimes; but one Saturday afternoon, after he had been saving for some time, his habit landed him in an awkward fix. He invited a "girl friend" to accompany him to a football match, and took with him one dollar to cover expenses. They travelled by train, and the fare was exactly one dime. He tendered his dollar to the booking clerk, and got, unfortunately, nine dimes as his change.

They saw the game, and afterwards, when he made no suggestion about tea, the girl asked him where they were going to have it. He then confessed that he had no money but dimes, and he was under a vow to save them, so that they could not have tea, and, moreover, they would have to walk home.

They walked home, but that was not the end. The girl told her father of the incident, and he praised the youth highly, took him into his office, and eventually gave him his daughter in marriage.

It sounds to me, personally, like something out of the "Arabian Nights." Does such virtue still exist?

The New Moon.

Everybody knows that superstition which decrees that the new moon must not be first observed through glass. Any who fail to keep this observance, it is said, are bound to have financial troubles throughout the lunar month to follow, while those who take the precaution will be free from such mundane worries. The correct procedure of the ceremony is to turn one's money in the pocket, bow three times to the moon; and, whatever one's financial resources are, they will suffice during the month.

I am told that an American, hearing this superstition related in a drawing-room, immediately forsook the company and went into the open, where, in the presence of the newly-born moon, he executed the necessary rites and contentedly turned and re-entered the house. The company—tactfully, be it said—did not inquire too closely into the proceedings, and he was left blissfully unconscious of the fact that his horn-rimmed spectacles had remained undisturbed throughout the performance.

A Musician's Dolls.

Men of genius do unusual things and "get away with them." Dragonetti, one of the greatest known players on the double bass, was a very eccentric genius. He had a great passion for dolls, and kept a number of them curiously dressed, with which he used to play like a child. Whenever he attended any musical function he took a selection of his dolls with him, and among them was always a black one which he called his wife.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.
LONDON, Tuesday.

The Windmill Theatre, a new theatre just off Shaftesbury avenue, was opened last night with "Inquest," by Mr. Michael Barringer. The theatre is rather small, but very cosy, seating about four hundred people, and it should prove very successful if it has the good fortune to secure plays such as "Inquest."

This play is a kind of thriller, the scene being a very sensational inquest, taking place in a Devonshire village, on the body of a man, which has been exhumed after rumours that he has been murdered. He has been so definitely murdered that he died from a revolver shot and from a dose of arsenic. The inquest is held to find out the truth, and it proves to be a very thrilling affair. The victim's wife knows something, but it takes a long time to get her to reveal the truth, which is startling when it does come out.

The acting was remarkably good. Mr. Herbert Lomas was the Coroner, and played the somewhat harassed official to the life. Miss Mary Glynne impersonated the wife of the dead man, and Miss Hilda Trevelyan, his mother. Both were really powerful in some striking episodes.

The play was warmly welcomed, and is worthy of support.

IRISH WEDDING IN LONDON.

STANLEY-CLARKE AND CARROLL-LEAHY.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.
LONDON, Tuesday.

St. Peter's Church, Eaton square, London, was decorated with pink and red peonies and deep blue delphiniums to-day for the marriage of Miss Olive Carroll-Leahy, daughter of the late Mr. Thomas J. Carroll-Leahy and of Mrs. Carroll-Leahy, of Woodfort, Mallow, Co. Cork, and grand-daughter of the late Mr. John Harold Barry, of Ballyvonare, Co. Cork. The bridegrom was Lieutenant-Colonel Arthur Christopher Stanley-Clarke, D.S.O., late of the Cameronians, who recently has been appointed to the command of the 1st Royal Scots Fusiliers.

The bride was escorted and given away by her brother, Major T. J. Carroll-Leahy. She wore a semi-mediæval gown of deepest cream ring velvet, the simple long-sleeved bodice being gathered to a long full skirt at a low waistline. From the waist fell a short train of the velvet. She wore a cream tulle veil, held by a halo of gold filigree, crystal and pearls, with a halo of the tulle surrounding it. Her bouquet was of deepest cream roses.

Miss Joan Beauchamp, a close friend of the bride, was her only attendant, and her dress was of emerald green lace, with bands of applique leaves in matching satin. She wore a long-sleeved coatee of green velvet, a wide hat of pale green in a fine straw, and carried a bouquet of cream roses.

Major D. S. Davidson, D.S.O., M.C., a fellow officer of the bridegroom, acted as best man.

RECEPTION.

Only a small reception for family and intimate friends was held afterwards, Mrs. Madeline Sayer acting as hostess for it at her house, 3 Queen's Elm square, Chelsea. The bride's mother, who is an invalid, was not able to travel to England for the wedding.

Miss Philippa Carroll-Leahy was an attractive figure in green and orange patterned chiffon and a green hat, and she was accompanied by her younger brother, Mr. H. Carroll-Leahy.

The honeymoon will be spent in Paris, whence the bride and bridegroom will go on to Italy.

The marriage took place at an early hour yesterday in the Church of the Sacred Heart, Donnybrook, of Seamus B. Morgan, eldest son of Patrick Morgan, dentist, and Mrs. B. Morgan, Richmond street, Dublin, and Miss Breed O'Connor, daughter of Batt O'Connor, T.D., and Mrs. B. O'Connor, Eglinton road.

Nuptial Mass, with Papal Benediction, was celebrated by the Rev. Father Moloney, Donnybrook.

The bride was given away by her father. She wore a gown of parchement-coloured grogcaine silk and Chantilly lace, carried a bouquet of Gloire-de-Dijon roses, and wore a picture hat to match.

After the reception, held at Eglinton road by the bride's mother, the happy couple left by the mail boat, the bride wearing a lime-green tweed coat, with hat and shoes of the same shade.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

THE LIFEBOAT COLLECTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Will you allow us again to draw the attention of the people of Dublin to the annual appeal on behalf of the noble and humane cause of the lifeboat, in connection with which the Special Effort Committee have organised their flag days for to-morrow, Wednesday and Thursday next, 24th and 25th inst., when, with the assistance of the lady helpers and others, the "man in the street" will be appealed to? The Institution's record is a magnificent one. Over £2,600 lives have been saved during the 107 years since it was instituted. The administrative expenses for the last year were under five per cent. No subsidy is received from any Government. It is hardly necessary to remind the readers of the Irish Times of the splendid work carried on by the Institution around the coasts of the Irish Free State. Several new motor lifeboats, with the most up-to-date equipment, have been added to the already large fleet of motor lifeboats on our coasts within the present year at the cost of nearly £30,000. The amount spent last year under the heading of upkeep and maintenance of the Irish boats was about £4,000 more than the total amount collected in Ireland, the balance having to be supplemented from the general fund in Great Britain. Thus it should be the duty of the people of Dublin and the Free State generally to give liberally towards the support of the good work done by the lifeboats.

The Special Effort Committee are gratified by the response that is being made to their appeal in the form of remittances sent through the post, as well as by collections organised by the Ladies' Guild, the managers of factories, workshops, offices, hotels and restaurants; and every section of the friends of the lifeboat can now have the opportunity of helping. We shall be pleased to acknowledge contributions of any amount which may be sent to us here.—Yours, etc.,

ARTHUR WHEWELL, Chairman, Special Effort Committee.
B. J. NEWCOMBE, Secretary, Special Effort Committee.

THE CAGED SKYLARK.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—"Quidnunc's" commendable zeal for the well-being of caged song-birds has not carried him the length of a dip into the provisions of the Wild Birds Protection Act passed by the Dail last year. In to-day's "Irishman's Diary" he writes:—"In addition to the many excellent regulations that have been introduced for the protection of wild birds, I think that some attempt should be made to ensure that cages in which singing birds are confined should be large enough to allow them reasonable freedom of movement."

In the Wild Birds Protection Act, 1930, Section 6 (Sub-section 1) runs as follows: "Any person who shall keep or confine a bird in any cage or other receptacle which shall not measure sufficient in height, length and breadth to permit such bird freely to stretch its wings and exercise itself shall be guilty of an offence under this section, and shall be liable on summary conviction thereof to a penalty not exceeding five pounds."

It is, therefore, for those who witness instances of cruel caging to report such matters to the Civic Guard officers, through whose judicious interference I may say that important improvements are often brought about without need of actual prosecution.—Yours, etc.,

C. B. MOFFAT,
Honorary Secretary,
Irish Society for Protection of Birds.
Dublin, June 23rd, 1931.

BRITISH MEDICAL ASSOCIATION.

Although the visit of the British Medical Association to Dublin in 1933 is a long way off, the Irish Committee, appointed some time ago to prepare for the visit, are already engaged in active preparations.

Mr. Ferris Scott, Financial Secretary to the British Medical Association, and Mr. Anderson, Assistant Medical Secretary, are at present in Dublin and in consultation with the Committee. They have already visited Trinity College and University College, and yesterday called on the Lord Mayor, accompanied by Dr. T. Gillman Moorhead, Dr. Hennessy, T.D.; Professors Bigger and O'Kelly, and Dr. Shanley, who are members of the Committee, and made a tour of inspection of the Mansion House.

IN A JAPANESE GARDEN.

MOTOR TRAVEL AS MAGIC CARPET.

A number of the members of the Engineering and Scientific Association of Ireland, with their wives and daughters, motored to Kildare yesterday to visit the Japanese garden at the National Stud Farm. The party were conducted by Mr. A. E. Porte, hon. secretary, who was assisted by Mr. T. Morgan Good.

The visitors were escorted through the Japanese garden by the head gardener, Mr. William Taylor, who told its story.

Lord Wavertree, then Colonel Hall Walker, devised this garden in 1906 and gave it to the nation. A notice states that it was made by Eida and his son, Minoru, between 1906-10. In its construction forty-five men and many farm horses were employed during the period of four years to convert what was in the beginning a swamp into one of the most charming spots that nurses a fairy tale

The garden is planned to symbolise the life of man. You follow him through the garden—walking in his actual footsteps—from the cradle to grave. There are flowers all the way, some of them hide hard, rocky and rough spots and lead to dark and winding ways. There are unguarded dangers and choices of routes, where an error would end in disaster.

From the cave of Birth crowned by a cherry tree you follow the babe to manhood, through ignorance to unfolding intelligence; up the hill of learning, past temptation to ambition; the choice of wedded life and through a path of joyful dalliance until the well of wisdom is reached by hard and enduring effort, which leads to the level garden of peace and contentment.

Mr. Morgan Good very kindly broadcast to the large company the story as it was related by Mr. Taylor.

After passing through the Japanese garden the company visited the stud farm. It was stated that the farm is self-supporting, and that since 1910 has made about £120,000.

DUBLIN HARBOUR NOTES.

THREE SHEETS IN THE WIND.

WHEN CLAY PIPES FAIL.

FROM OUR HARBOUR CORRESPONDENT.

The ingenuity necessary for the drying of laundry in the confined spaces of the tenement houses and back courts, situated in the vicinity of the River Liffey, is worthy of its brain of an able seaman in a sailing ship. In some cases a huge pole, fitted with block and halliards complete, is rigged out of the window, and from it multi-coloured garments flutter in the breeze like bunting seen on a excursion steamer. Perhaps, more efficient still is the pulley arrangement which stretches across a court between opposite houses, whereby the clothes can be hauled out on a line running between two blocks—a contrivance better known among sailors as, "an endless fall."

Three bed-sheets, flapping cheerily in the wind, were suspended from one of these lines the other day, and their presence, discernible from the deck of one of the steamers lying in the river, gave rise to a rather interesting subject for conversation among the crew. The men sat around on the fore-hatch, a favourite place for "yarning" aboard ship, having finished their work for the day.

THE STAGGERING STAGE.

"It's a bit of a puzzler to me," remarked one of the firemen, pointing to the washing, "how a fellow can trace any connection between three sheets in the wind, such as them there, and a bloke that has drunk too much beer."

The ignorance of the fireman was not to his discredit in any way; for the sheets referred to in this well known nautical expression are three wire ropes which are secured to the corners, or clews, of the three largest sails in a squared-rigged vessel. These sheets are situated on the "lee," or sheltered, side of the ship; but if—through, perhaps, a sudden shift of the wind—this side becomes the "weather," or windy side, the three sheets are then "in the wind." A ship caught in such a position becomes temporarily out of control and staggers about, yawing and plunging in a manner rather reminiscent of a drunken man.

At first thought one does not associate foot-and-mouth disease with ships; nevertheless, an embargo, such as was placed on the export of cattle into England last week, is probably more noticeable at the Liffeyside than anywhere else. In these times of depression the cattle trade is the chief mainstay which enables several of our coasters to remain in commission, and a prolonged embargo can result in serious consequences to the crews of the steamers, if not the owners themselves.

FAR-REACHING EFFECTS.

It seems inconceivable that the disease could have such far-reaching effects as to prevent a lightship from being placed on her station, yet on one occasion, such proved to be the case. The vessel was fitting out at Kingstown, preparatory to being towed out to a position on the east coast of Ireland, in order that the ship, which was already stationed there, could be brought into dock for overhaul. Everything was in readiness with the exception of some lenses for the lantern, which were being conveyed across from England. Owing, however, to the prevailing regulations with regard to the importation of straw during the epidemic, the cases containing the straw-packed lenses could not be opened, and, in consequence, the lightship was compelled to remain in harbour for a considerable period after the date arranged for her departure.

Possibly the departure of the 5,000 ton Amaranoona, to say nothing of the Danaë Head, boasting the comfortable tonnage of 3,273 tons, may have accounted for the rather bare appearance of Alexandra Basin. Grain continues to be one of the principal cargoes brought by foreign-going vessels, and the Vodice started the hall rolling early in the week with a cargo from Novorossisk. Although the critics who haunt the quaysides have a wonderful insight with regard to the movements of shipping, there are times when they find difficulty in expressing their knowledge. Inquiries as to the loading port of the Vodice, for example, proved to be a stumbling-block which the most violent puffs at clay pipes—the apparent source of inspiration—failed to overcome.

THOUSANDS OF MILES.

The Bradesk arrived later in the week with a consignment of wheat and maize from Rosario. She is a typical Cardiff vessel, of the tramp class, 2,059 registered tons, and belongs to the Leeds Shipping Company. She jogged along the invisible trail of 6,391 miles at a steady nine knots, and made the passage in thirty days. The human mind finds it difficult to grasp distance when the mileage runs into thousands. The forecastle sailor seems subconsciously to overcome the problem by measuring his distance with time. Ask him, for example, the distance from Dublin to Rosario, and, nine times out of ten, he will reply, "About thirty days' run"—the number of days, of course, varying with the speed of his particular ship.

The Theano, of Rotterdam, and the City of Antwerp, of Dublin, which ply regularly between the Continent and the Liffey, shipped only part cargoes for this port last week, and proceeded to Belfast on the day of their arrival. Needless to say, such a proceeding was not popular with those of the crew who have their homes at Dublin.

UNION DAY AT ST. PATRICK'S COLLEGE, MAYNOOTH.

UNION DAY AT MAYNOOTH COLLEGE.

AN EXPLANATION OF "CATHOLIC ACTION."

MORAL TEACHING IN MEDICAL SCHOOLS.

THERE was a very large attendance of the Hierarchy and of priests at St. Patrick's College, Maynooth, yesterday, when the annual meeting of the Maynooth Union was held. Priests were present from almost every part of Ireland, and from many places in England and Scotland.

After the distribution of prizes to the students who were successful at the recent examinations, Monsignor McCaffrey, the President of the College, delivered an address on "Catholic Action," in which he described the aims and objects of the movement. Canon Power (Cork) read a paper on "A National Ecclesiological Museum in Maynooth College," and the Rev. P. O'Neill a paper on "Catholic Moral Teaching in Medical Schools."

The bishops issued a request that the laity should join with the clergy in prayers for fine weather.

WHAT "CATHOLIC ACTION" MEANS.

The Right Rev. Monsignor McCaffrey welcomed the members of the Union, and went on to say that the College would provide accommodation for clerical visitors from abroad who would come to Dublin for the Eucharistic Congress next year, provided that they gave notice. They had had a very harmonious and successful year in the College.

There is, he said, one point about which there has been some misunderstanding in some quarters on which I feel called upon to say a few words. Last October some generous benefactors, who wish to remain anonymous, offered to the trustees of the College funds for the establishment of a Chair of Catholic Action in Maynooth. The offer was accepted, and while, for various reasons, no appointment was made, a series of lectures on this subject was arranged. We were not able to do much, but there is one thing, I think, that we succeeded in doing, and that is to give the students a correct notion of what the Pope means by Catholic action. The name may be new, and, in its English dress, possibly slightly misleading; but the idea underlying it is as old as the Church itself, and, therefore, there is no reason why some apostolic the Church, and even timid souls within it, should be unduly alarmed at the Papal approval of this movement or the establishment of such a Chair at Maynooth.

THE IDEAL AIMED AT.

Catholic action does not mean the setting up of some kind of secret organisation for the violent extermination of non-Catholics or for carrying on against them a campaign of social and economic boycott. Neither does it imply an organised effort to exclude non-Catholics from public appointments, for the Church teaches very clearly that in their allotment of offices the authorities of the State are bound by distributive justice to deal fairly with all classes, and that only merit and general suitability should be the only passport to appointments. Nor does it mean interference in purely political matters or movements. On the contrary, the Pope expressly excludes politics from the scope of Catholic Action. On all such questions Catholics are as free as other members of the community to follow their own choice. Indeed, I might say, that in any State a distinctly Catholic party is not the ideal to be aimed at, though in some countries it has become a necessity.

The true ideal is to endeavour to secure that the main principles of all parties are so consonant with Christian teaching that Catholics can with a safe conscience give to any of them their adherence and support. To put it briefly, what Pius XI. means by Catholic Action is the organisation of the Catholic laity under the guidance of their Bishops to keep Catholic and Christian principles to the forefront in the public life of the world, to ensure that Catholic works correspond with Catholic faith, that Catholic living corresponds with Catholic teaching, that Catholic practice should be in accordance with Catholic principles, and so, by the harmony between faith and works, to create a favourable impression on those who are outside the fold.

THE WORLD TO-DAY.

The Pope sees more clearly—what, indeed, all thoughtful men can see—that the trend of the world to-day is away from revealed religion, that the tide is running strongly against Christianity, and that, if things go on as they have gone for the past fifty years, a situation may arise such as confronted the Church in the early centuries, when the world was pagan in its religion, in its morals, and in its general outlook on life. The Christians in those days, though few in numbers, made up for their numerical inferiority by their zeal. Their conduct was in accordance with their principles. They made converts and overcame opposition, not by opposing violence to violence, but by the purity of their lives and their good works, by the fact that they were just in their dealings with their fellow-men, truthful, charitable neighbours, kind masters, trustworthy servants, model citizens, and capable of giving an account of the faith that was in them, and ready to suffer for it, and to die for it when the day of persecution came.

The Pope, realising the dangers that are with us, and the still greater dangers, perhaps, that lie ahead for Christianity, and knowing, too, that some clerics are so clerical that they think they need no help from the laity, while some laymen are so lay that they regard the defence of religion as work only for the clergy, wishes to strengthen the divinely appointed ministers by the creation of a lay apostolate. He wishes to organise the laity under the guidance of their bishops, so that they will witness by their lives to the perfection of Christ's teaching, that they will create and foster a sound public opinion, that they will strive that in all departments of life—in the family, in the State, education, literature, and even amusements—due attention will be paid to Christian principles.

Understood in this sense, there is no reason why any man who professes to be a follower of Christ need be alarmed at the Papal approbation of Catholic Action, nor at the policy of the trustees of this college in establishing such a chair at Maynooth.

MESSAGE TO THE POPE.

The following message was sent to the Pope:—"The members of the Maynooth Union, which represents 1,000 Irish bishops and priests, meeting to-day in Maynooth, desire to express their sorrow at the attacks made in Italy on Catholic Action, and fervently hope that Your Holiness may long be spared to vindicate the rights of the Church."

MUSEUM FOR THE COLLEGE.

"OVERDUE FOR 50 YEARS."

The Rev. Canon Power, D.Litt., Professor of Archæology, University College, Cork, read a paper on "A National Ecclesiological Museum in Maynooth." A museum in Maynooth College, national and ecclesiastical in character, he said, was overdue for half a century. It might, indeed, long since have inspired the historian of the Irish Church for which they had been waiting. Golden opportunities had been missed, and never again would it be easy, as it might have been in the past, to get together the requisite exhibits. The general purposes or utility of a museum were (1) to cultivate and infuse a true artistic feeling, a love for the true and beautiful; (2) to stimulate historical curiosity; (3) to broaden the intellectual vision and the student's view of life; (4) to exercise a stabilising influence upon society, to which it presents a practical lesson in national continuity and rational, natural development; and (5) the museum becomes an incentive to creative action by its presentation of great historic and artistic achievement.

The Maynooth Museum would specialise in objects illustrating Church life in general and the olden life of the Irish Church. As a collection of strictly Irish ecclesiastical objects, this museum would probably be the only thing of the kind in the country. To beget and to hold the confidence of the Irish clergy the Maynooth Museum must be so incorporated that it can guarantee the perpetual preservation of the objects entrusted to it. Many objects of national and scientific value were retained in private hands, simply because their owners were not satisfied to donate them on the security at present, or hitherto offered by Irish ecclesiastical institutions.

GIFTS AND LOANS.

In addition to the objects or specimens which the College expected to get as gifts from the country, they may be able to secure, at least as a loan, some further things from the National Museum, which must have hundreds of duplicates packed away in drawers. These National Museum duplicates are at present useless, or worse than useless, for they occupy valuable space. Certainly, said the speaker, they ought to be able to procure, through the good-will of Kildare street authorities, some plaster casts of crosses, and inscribed stones, and, perhaps, re-productions of reliquaries and bells. In case the present custodians might not be able, for one reason or another, to actually donate objects, they may be able and willing to lend them for a short, long, or indefinite period. Gauged by any reasonable standard popular knowledge of Irish antiquity was, he said, at an inferior level. Contemplating a comprehensive series of ecclesiastical antiquities, such as he expected the new museum to possess, the serious-minded visitor would be brought to realise the continuity and the vitality, and even the future destiny of the Irish Church. By subtle suggestions the mind is switched on to a train of thought which envisages the past, present and future of that Church as stages in the Divine plan. The Irish Church's survival through centuries of suppression, its resurrection unsullied and unseared, its hoary antiquity transmuted into glowing youth, is a phenomenon unprecedented, perhaps, in the history of Christianity.

In conclusion he said:—"We read of developing Irish national resources—agricultural, mineral, manufacturing. All these are excellent things, and those who promote them are worthy of our loyal support; but never lose sight of it that Ireland's best resources are of the supernatural order. It is not as industrialists, nor as statesmen, nor as soldiers that we are to save the world, but as teachers, preachers, missionaries and apologists. This and no other is the appointed mission of our race, for which Heaven during the centuries has been preparing us. Are we ready to accept it?"

THE VOTE OF THANKS.

The Very Rev. Dean Hynes, Cork, moved a vote of thanks to Canon Power.

The Rev. Canon Boylan, Vice-President of the College, seconding, said that the ideal put before them had been before the College for a long time under the auspices of the Union. There was no association that could more fittingly undertake the sponsoring of a scheme for an ecclesiological museum at Maynooth.

The Rev. Dr. Browne, supporting the motion in Irish, said that museums such as was suggested were to be found in most countries in Europe.

The Rev. L. Murray, Armagh, said that while such a museum was an absolute necessity, there were some difficulties to be encountered in putting the idea into practice. He did not think that Maynooth was the most suitable position for it, and said that Dublin would be a more suitable and convenient place.

The vote of thanks was passed.

SCIENCE AND RELIGION

MORAL TEACHING IN MEDICINE.

The Rev. P. O'Neill, D.D., read a paper on "Catholic Moral Teaching in Medical Schools."

A knowledge of the principles of dogmatic and moral theology, he said, was necessary to medical practitioners for the sure and moral exercise of their art. If doctors did not feel the need of the principles and teachings of theology in their practice to the same degree as priests experience the want of medical knowledge in the direction of consciences, it was not because the need was actually less. It was the fashion to keep science and religion apart—in fact, the belief was widespread that they cannot be reconciled. It was no wonder that such a notion had its effect even on Catholics, whose religious education had not kept pace with their scientific studies. More frequently than those of any other profession, except the priesthood, the doctor and surgeon are confronted in the performance of their duties with grave moral issues. It was, therefore, imperative that they should receive special consideration in any developed scheme of Catholic action which aims at "a union of all Catholic forces for the practice and defence of Catholic principles in individual, family, and social life."

The science of medicine should not be divorced from religion and morals. In the age of Pericles medicine was a branch of philosophy, and the profession was regarded as a kind of priesthood. In the middle ages it was entirely under the ægis of the Church. The monasteries of the time of Charlemagne were the centres of medical teaching. Much, if not all, of the scientific literature which doctors use was written by non-Catholics, who, more or less, disregarded, if they did not misrepresent, moral principles.

THE NATIONAL UNIVERSITY.

The Rev. Father Langford, University College, Dublin, proposing a vote of thanks, said that, while the teaching in University College Dublin was, in fact, completely consistent with Catholic principles, there was no provision on behalf of the University itself for instructions on medical ethics; but such instruction was given with the co-operation of the professors, and was attended by students.

The Rev. Father Gaffney, O.P., seconding, said that it was for them to declare there and then their firm belief that the National University must in this matter come into line with Christian and Catholic principles. Catholicism he said, was in an anomalous position in the National University, and it was time that such a state of things should be ended. Tribute had been paid to the integrity of Irish Catholic doctors, but the Catholic nurses should not be forgotten.

The vote was passed.

THE HIERARCHY.

The following members of the Hierarchy were in attendance:—His Eminence Cardinal MacRory; the Most Rev. Dr. Byrne, Archbishop of Dublin; the Most Rev. Dr. Harty, Archbishop of Cashel; the Most Rev. ECCLESIASTICAL ART.

An exhibition of ecclesiastical art, in one of the rooms of the College—the first of its kind—attracted the notice of the visitors. There were some very fine examples of Irish craftsmanship, contributed by bishops, clergy and art workers, which included gold chalices, church silver, gold and silver Mosse, metal work, enamels, architectural drawings, medals and badges, vestments, Limerick laces, tapestry cushion, hand-bound books, leather work, etc.

THE UNION DINNER.

Between five and six hundred members of the Union sat down to dinner in the evening, under the presidency of Monsignor McCaffrey.

The usual toasts—the Pope, the visitors, and the Union—were proposed and duly honoured.

When women clerks employed at a "potato crisp" factory on the Great West road, London, returned from lunch yesterday they found lying huddled up in a corner of one of the offices a typist, Miss Ford, of Dollis Hill avenue, Cricklewood. She was taken by ambulance to Brentford Hospital, where she was found to be dead.

Proposed Industrial Fair.

Peculiar Position In Cork.

FROM OUR REPORTER.
CORK, Tuesday.

A peculiar situation has arisen in connection with the Industrial and Agricultural Fair which it is proposed to hold in Cork next year.

The following communication has been received from Mr. Andrew M. O'Brien, general manager and secretary:—

"It is with much regret that the Executive Committee has been forced to the conclusion that the proposed Industrial and Agricultural Fair, to be held in Cork next year, cannot be carried out. The Irish manufacturers who have been approached are of the opinion that the time is not opportune for an exhibition such as planned, but assurances are forthcoming that they are prepared to support such a project if undertaken at a future date."

Prominent members of the Executive Committee, when interviewed, denied that there was any foundation for this statement, and said that the exhibition would be held according to plan.

A meeting of the Committee was held this afternoon, at which the following members were present:—Messrs. George Crosbie, B.L. (chairman); J. J. Horgan, Captain P. H. Cooper, T. H. O'Sullivan, W. T. Hickey, W. A. Collins, O. P. McCarthy, M. O'Mahony, J. Corcoran, M. Molony, W. Griffin, T. A. O'Kelly, S. McCarthy, T. Wood, E. T. Cussen, T. C. Dowdall, and R. Long.

The following statement was afterwards issued:—

"The Committee accepted the resignation of Mr. A. M. O'Brien from the position of general manager, and unanimously appointed Mr. M. T. Mahony as secretary. The appointment of a general manager was deferred."

Lord Charlemont in Collision.

Accident to Northern Minister's Car.

Lord Charlemont, Minister of Education, and the Right Hon. J. M. Andrews, Minister of Labour, in the Government of Northern Ireland, while motoring to Carr, near Lisburn, County Down, collided with a car driven by Mr. F. Both cars were badly damaged. The occupants escaped without serious injury.

Mr. McDowell and his friend were imprisoned in their car until the windows were broken by Lord Charlemont and Mr. Andrews.

Lord Charlemont, who was travelling to Carr to open a new school, got a "lift" on another car, but this also broke down, and he had to complete the journey on foot.

LIMERICK SYNOD.

POSITION OF THE CHURCH OF IRELAND.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.
LIMERICK, Tuesday.

The annual Synod of the Diocese of Limerick was held to-day in the Diocesan Hall, Pery street. The Bishop (Dr. White), who presided, in the course of his address said:—The year that lies behind us was not marked by any big change in our position or membership. So far as I can judge, our work has been carried on quietly and efficiently, and we are like a city at unity in itself—"unity," I say, not uniformity. There are, and, no doubt, always will be, differences in men's apprehensions of spiritual realities.

TWO GREAT EVENTS.

To-day we look back to the great gathering at Lambeth last year, and forward to next year's celebration of the arrival of St. Patrick at Saul, Co. Down, in the year 432. The two events are closely connected with each other. Patrick came here as a bishop to organise scattered bodies of believers in Christ and to win new converts. He was a great missionary, and visited many parts of Ireland, including Limerick. His See, or episcopal seat, was at Armagh, and our Primate is enthroned in the Cathedral on the hill where, we believe, Patrick worshipped in some humble and primitive House of God. When, then, we speak of the historic Church of Ireland we are simply stating our claim to represent the fifth century Church organised by Patrick, fully understanding that neither we nor any other body of Christians see eye to eye in all matters with men who lived fifteen centuries ago. Patrick began his Episcopal work in 432, Augustine began his in Canterbury in 597. Our Church is, therefore, not a daughter, but an elder sister of the larger and more powerful Church of England. It is, therefore, natural to find our own Church holding a special place in the history and development of those Conferences at Lambeth, which have done so much to strengthen the life and broaden the outlook of our world-wide communion.

During the years behind us the Churches of England and Ireland have in many of their activities, especially in the mission field, continued to work together as one body. The two great missionary societies, and the still older Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, were then, and still are, the main organisations through which we give our contribution to the extension of Christ's Kingdom throughout the world. In connection with them our university has established missions in which our men and women are doing fine service, and so we are taking our rightful share in spreading the faith which the missionary Bishop Patrick came here to preach fifteen centuries ago.

INCREASING TOLERANCE.

As the British Empire was built up, and is maintained, by men and women from Ireland, as well as from Great Britain, so the great communion represented at Lambeth has in all its provinces among leaders, as well as large numbers of its rank and file, men of Irish blood and upbringing.

Whatever steps we may take towards getting into closer touch with our fellow Christians of other Churches—an end much to be desired—will, we may feel confident, not lead us in the direction of forfeiting, or weakening, our full comradeship with our own people in the many dioceses and provinces all over the earth which were represented at Lambeth.

Meanwhile, we in this city and diocese have the happiness of feeling at peace with all our fellow-Christians. We do not encourage needless controversy, or fancy that our small minds can contain all God's truth. We are firm disbelievers in the infallibility of any man, or body of men, inside or outside our own organisation, and among the fallible we humbly recognise ourselves.

Looking back at the fifty-three years of my ministry, I am thankful to God to note the ever-growing spirit of tolerance and open-mindedness in the majority of both clergy and people.

Moving the adoption of the report of the Diocesan Board of Education, the Dean of Limerick referred to a proposition at the General Synod that the Representative Body should provide a large sum of money for the transit of Church children to suitable schools, and said that it was only right it should be found. Their own Diocesan Board was doing its best to arrange for the transit of children to central schools.

Mr. J. A. Haydn seconded the motion.

The report was adopted.

New Houses for Bray.

Local Government Inquiry.

THE petition of Mr. P. J. Meghen, the Commissioner performing the duties of the Bray Urban Council, seeking to put into force the powers of the Land Clauses Acts for the purpose of taking compulsorily certain lands required under the Housing of the Working Classes Acts, 1890 to 1921, was inquired into yesterday by Mr. T. F. Strahan, M.R.I.A., Local Government Inspector, in the Town Hall, Bray.

Mr. Sean Mac Cathmhail, Town Clerk, said that in order to carry out the scheme they required a loan of £30,000 to £32,000. This was the first definite step that had been taken to remove part of the insanitary area of the town. In order to provide for the occupiers of the houses to be demolished the Commissioner had purchased the site known as Barry's Field, at Sunnybank, and on this site, and on portion of the Fair Green, he proposed to erect twelve four-roomed and twenty-six three-roomed houses, and had entered into a contract for this purpose. The various owners were asked the amount they required for the purchase of their interests, but the sums quoted were considered too high, and that would be settled by arbitration.

The rates for the year ended 31st March last were 17s. 6d. in the £, and 19s. 8d. for the present year. Their borrowing powers amounted to £63,985, and of that sum there was still £28,567 unexercised. The tenders that they had received for the erection of the houses would work out at £299 15s. 6d. for the four-roomed houses, and £256 4s. 4d. for the three-roomed houses. The building costs would be more favourable than they had anticipated, and deducting the Government grant of £60 a house they hoped the net cost of the scheme would be about £25,000. He believed the rent would work out at 8s. 5d. a week for the four-roomed house, and 7s. 2d. for the three-roomed, but when the net cost of the building was arrived at the rents may be further reduced.

Mr. E. M. Murphy, Engineer to the Council, said that the houses they were to demolish in Bray were beyond repair. Nothing except the rebuilding of the houses could make them fit for human habitation.

Dr. H. Raverty, M.O.H., giving evidence, said that in 1929 he, associated with the Town Surveyor, made a survey of the dwelling houses in the town. The number of tenements with more than two occupants per room was 571, and the total number of occupiers of these particular houses was 3,446. They needed 550 houses as those indicated on the map were all unfit for human habitation owing to bad drainage, and lack of sanitary accommodation, and were dangerous to health. The site was not the best for building, as he would have preferred the new houses to be built on high open spaces. He suggested that no laneways be allowed at the rear of the houses, as a precaution against the dumping of rubbish.

This concluded the inquiry.

Mr. Commissioner Meghen, thanking the Inspector, said that he was very glad there was practically no objection to the acquisition of the sites. They were anxious to get the scheme at the lowest possible cost so that it would not place too great a burden on the ratepayers.

The Inspector congratulated Mr. Meghen on the excellent work he had done in trying to solve the slum problem of Bray, and said that he deserved the thanks of the whole community.

One woman and a boy were killed and another woman died from her injuries as the result of an accident in Bury New road, Salford, yesterday, when they were knocked down by a motor 'bus.

Mrs. Curtin Awarded £6,000 Compensation.

Sequel to Murder of Tipperary Police Officer.

Counsel and Activities of "a Secret Organisation."

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.
TIPPERARY, Tuesday.

BEFORE Judge Sealy at Tipperary Circuit Court to-day Mrs. Maureen Curtin claimed £15,000 compensation for the loss of her husband, Superintendent John Curtin, who was shot at the gate leading to his residence, Friarsfield House, some miles north of Tipperary town, on the night of March 20th last.

The claim stated that Superintendent Curtin was murdered while on duty by reason of his activities in bringing disturbers of the peace to justice.

Mr. Cecil Lavery, K.C., with Mr. M. J. Lennon (instructed by Messrs. Darcy and Co., solicitors, Tipperary) appeared for Mrs. Curtin; Mr. J. L. Esmonde (instructed by Mr. F. E. Tydd, solicitor) appeared in opposition to the claim for Tipperary South Riding County Council; and Mr. J. J. Walshe (instructed by Messrs. William Frewen and Son) represented Tipperary Urban Council.

COUNSEL'S STATEMENT.

Mr. Lavery said Superintendent Curtin joined the Civic Guards at the inception of the force in April, 1922. His promotion was extraordinarily rapid, and at the time of his death he held the rank of second grade Superintendent, and was on the way to promotion to first grade rank. There was a secret organisation in the country, calling itself the Irish Republican Army, which had for its object the overthrow of the State by violent means. That organisation existed in Tipperary. It was because of Superintendent Curtin's activities in investigating crimes committed, or suspected to have been committed by that organisation, that he met his death motoring home some miles outside Tipperary, after inspection duty, between half-past ten and eleven o'clock on the night of the 20th March. He found closed the gate, which ordinarily was left open. Obviously the gate was closed for the purpose of compelling the Superintendent to get out of his car to open it.

"COWARDLY MURDER."

It was while doing so that, in the glare of the car's headlights, fire was opened on him by several persons from behind a neighbouring wall, and he fell with a number of bullet wounds in his body. He was found lying there by his wife, to whom he had been only ten months married, and her sister, and brought into the house, where he died shortly afterwards.

One would have thought, said Mr. Lavery, that the perpetrators of this cowardly murder would have been animated with some sense of shame, and have been satisfied with their work; but a few days after the murder a women's organisation called Cumann na mBan, which was associated with the secret organisation calling itself the Irish Republican Army, published a poster in the district, declaring that "the men of Tipperary, true to the traditions of their forefathers, proud of the lead they gave in 1919 in ambush, have shown that they will not allow a Free State police superintendent to stand between them and freedom." Mr. Lavery said comment was needless on the type of women who produced such a document.

Mr. Lavery added that Superintendent Curtin was aged twenty-eight. His wife, some two months after his death, gave birth to twins, one born dead and the other dying a short time afterwards.

WIDOW'S EVIDENCE.

Mrs. Maureen Curtin, the widow, who stated that she came from Killarney, and had received £700 as share of her father's estate, described how her sister called her out of bed on the night of March 20th, and when they both went to the entrance gate, which was open, they found the motor car engine in motion and the lights on. She found her husband lying on his back near the car, unconscious. He never regained consciousness.

Dr. J. F. O'Halloran, Tipperary, said he found five shots in the dead officer's body. The bullet that entered his heart seemed to have been fired while he was on the ground.

Chief Superintendent S. Hannigan said that the area of which Superintendent Curtin was in charge was disturbed, and there was much organised armed crime by the I.R.A., with which the Cumann na mBan, which had members in that district, were associated. Superintendent Curtin was active concerning illegal organisations.

Cross-examined by Mr. Walshe, witness said that only one organisation—the I.R.A.—could be responsible for depriving a British soldier of his uniform in the area some time ago.

Mr. Walshe—Is it not common knowledge that the British uniform is objectionable to persons other than the I.R.A.?

Witness—Persons wearing British uniforms are not interfered with by anybody except the I.R.A.

Detective Officer Kelly said that Superintendent Curtin never carried firearms.

Mr. Hamilton P. Bell, finance officer of the Civic Guard, said that Superintendent Curtin had a salary of £480, £60 a year rent allowance, with locomotion and subsistence allowance of £128 per annum.

ACTUARIES' ESTIMATES.

Dr. C. E. Howell, actuary, Dublin, estimated that the minimum compensation should be £7,680 and the maximum £10,861.

For the defence, Mr. P. F. Sheehan, actuary, estimated the financial loss to Mrs. Curtin by the death of her husband at £4,752.

Judge Sealy said that any reasonable man in his position listening to the evidence was bound to come to the conclusion that Superintendent Curtin was murdered on account of his activities in bringing criminals to justice. Therefore, his widow was entitled to compensation. Though one must deeply sympathise with her, left without her husband and without means, still the burden of compensation must fall largely on innocent people. Taking into consideration that Mrs. Curtin had no children to support, he would give a decree for £6,000, with costs and expenses, to be levied off the South Riding of Tipperary.

The Spanish Elections.

The Spanish elections for the Constituent Cortes, which will be held next Sunday, will not pass without trouble; but they are unlikely to provoke another crisis. Six months ago these elections were anticipated with eager interest by everybody; now they are coming as an anti-climax. The municipal elections of last April, and the crowded hour which followed them, have left little room for interest in an event that irevitably must be of secondary significance. Nevertheless, next Sunday's contests will have a certain positive value which the municipal elections did not possess. The earlier event decided what Spain's future would not be; the polling for the Cortes will define precisely what it will be—for the present, at any rate. Before last April there existed, for all practical purposes, two parties in Spain—Monarchists and anti-Monarchists. To-day, at the broadest reckoning, there are three main outlooks, represented in varying degrees by no fewer than twenty-five parties. The largest group of candidates consists of the constitutional Republicans, headed by Señor Alcala Zamora, the provisional President, and Señor Maura, Minister of the Interior. Next in size comes the Socialist-Republican Alliance, with the Socialists forming a close third. These are the standard-bearers of the present Republican régime, and represent the desire for settlement in Spanish affairs.

Against them is arrayed a host of diverse elements. The fifty-eight candidates of the new "Catholic Party" seek cordial relations with the Vatican. There is a small Monarchist remnant; and a dangerous significance lurks in the candidature of twenty-two Communists. Fifteen years ago, as the Madrid Correspondent of The Times observes, Trotsky prophesied that Spain would become the Russia of the West. Since the removal of King Alfonso the Spanish "Reds" have done their utmost to bring Trotsky's prophecy into effect. They are waging a fierce campaign against the moderation of Senor Zamora's Provisional Government, and their work is reflected in the strikes that persistently have retarded the establishment of order. It is, of course, inconceivable that this disorder can be ascribed to a section of opinion that can nominate no more than twenty-two candidates out of nearly a thousand. The practical menace to the Republican Right in Spain is provided by the Syndicalists—or National Confederation of Labour—who, though they refuse to acknowledge the dictates of Moscow, are Communist in everything but name. This group openly assumes responsibility for the burning of churches and convents.

Although, indeed, they profess a difference of ideals, the two parties—Syndicalist and Communist—merge into each other by indefinite degrees. In practice they both profess unswerving enmity to any form of "capitalist" government, and their hatred of the Church is one. What does it matter that the Syndicalists dissent from, while the Communists stand by, the principles of the Third International? Russia herself worries at times about those principles, but her campaign against established order never falters. In this latter respect the National Confederation of Labour joins hands with Moscow. Recently Señor Angel Pestaña, one of its standard-bearers, boasted that, if the Spanish Government should deny the claim of the workers to participate in wealth, they would destroy the new régime. In a similar vein Dr. Vallina takes up the cudgels for the peasants. If the peasants are not given land before October, he says, they will take it, or Andalusia and Estramadura will go up in flames from end to end. These menaces are more than braggadocio; for the Syndicalist organisation has branches all over Spain, and everywhere is undermining the stability of the moderate Socialist Party. The country's only hope lies in a definite victory for the Republicans and Socialists in Sunday's elections. Stabilised in office, such a Government could take measures against subversive elements from which the present insecure Administration shrinks.

Foot-and-Mouth Disease.

A fresh outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease, which occurred yesterday in Lancashire, is the thirty-sixth in Great Britain since the 17th June. Infection is still confined to Northern England and to Scottish counties, and Lancashire, with fifteen outbreaks, is the chief centre of the disease. The whole island, however, suffers from the Ministry of Agriculture's "stand-still" order and from its strict embargo on Irish imports; and, apart from the slaughter of infected animals, heavy losses are falling on the cattle trade and on the farming community. One of England's leading shows is in peril; for, if the "stand-still" order is not modified next week, the Royal Show, which is due to open at Warwick on the 7th July, will have no exhibits of stock from the southern counties. The fact that many of the present outbreaks have been traced to Irish cattle has provoked once more a flood of the usual calumnies against this country; and the old story is repeated in England that no amount of Government inspection will induce the Irish farmer to report the existence of disease upon his holding. Well-informed Englishmen give no credence to such statements. The Agricultural Correspondent of The Times describes them as "wild," and points out that last year the veterinary inspectors at English and Scottish ports did not detect the disease in a single one of the 950,000 cattle and 1,000,000 sheep which were shipped from Ireland. The veterinary departments of the two Irish States have, indeed, an exceptionally high reputation for thoroughness and vigilance, and they enjoy the full co-operation of the Irish farmer, than whom no man is more keenly alive to his own interests.

To-day the situation as regards foot-and-mouth disease in Ireland can be described as satisfactory. The Northern Ministry has taken prompt steps to deal with the outbreak at Downpatrick which was the cause of all the mischief. It reports to-day that the disease has been confined to the farm where it was detected, and that no fresh outbreak has occurred. In these circumstances the Ministry has sanctioned the holding of the North-West of Ireland Agricultural Show to-day and to-morrow, although its importance will be diminished by the absence of exhibits from the Free State. Yesterday the Free State Department of Agriculture proclaimed an embargo on entries of all cattle, sheep and pigs from Northern Ireland; and thus southern exhibits sent to the Londonderry Show would find themselves prisoners in the six counties. The Free State retains a spotlessly clean bill of health, and the British Ministry of Agriculture has accepted its assurances to this effect. Nevertheless, that knowledge offers small comfort to Irish farmers, cattle-traders and shippers, whose business has been dislocated for a full week. It is very unlikely that the British ports will be open for to-morrow's cattle market in Dublin. If the embargo is maintained for many weeks—or, indeed, for another week—our farmers' outlook and the position at the ports will become grave. We hope, therefore, that, in view of the satisfactory reports from Ireland, the British Ministry will consent quickly to mitigate its veto and will sanction the entry of Irish cattle for immediate slaughter at English ports. The Free State has an especially strong case for such remission. As Colonel Howard Bury will point out in a parliamentary question to the Minister of Agriculture to-morrow, the Free State not only is exempt from cattle disease, but is protected by the Customs barrier. To this safeguard the Free State Government now has added the embargo on entries of cattle from Northern Ireland.

The British Legion.

Preparations are being made to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the British Legion on the 1st July. The chief object of these celebrations will be to increase the membership of the Legion, which, although it has accomplished much during its life towards the betterment of the ex-Service men's lot and the provision of employment, still lacks many who ought to have joined its ranks. Indeed, it is hard to over-estimate the work of the Legion for its members. At no time did it dissipate its energies in a futile and improper effort to shoulder the duties of the Government towards the men who fought in the War. Its policy always has been to co-ordinate benevolence and to recall authority to a sense of its duties when that sense was found to be deficient. Three thousand six hundred and thirty-five branches in England, Ireland and Wales represent the Legion's scope of activity. Over sixty-two thousand appeals in respect of pensions have been brought by it before the House of Lords' Independent Tribunal, and over thirty-three thousand of these have been successful. It is, however, in the finding of employment and the preservation of a comradeship, which between 1914 and 1918 seemed to be eternal, and now must be sought, that the Legion has deserved best of the nation. In Ireland, as in England and Wales, many have cause to be grateful for its energies on their behalf, and truly the Prince of Wales was justified when he described it as "one of our greatest organisations for doing good." It is to be hoped that its appeal for new members will not fall on dull ears. The least particle of that temper which Armistice Day evokes among those who have the right to share its memories surely will be sufficient to bring the old sodality to the ranks where they belong.

"Racketeers."

The collector of income tax has found the Achilles heel of the "gangster" who hitherto has defied the police forces of the United States. The over-weening Scarface Al Capone, who forced his illicit wares on Chicago at the revolver's mouth, has been his first important victim, and now the Federal Government, recognising his value, has organised an income tax drive against "racketeers." Examination of cash deposits already has revealed a remarkable condition of affairs. Huge accumulations of wealth, belonging to jail-birds and known, if often unconvicted, assassins have been traced, and, no doubt, they will whet the enthusiasm of those Federal officials who, innocent of "graft" themselves, see the "gangsters" as potential contributors to liabilities in respect of income tax evasions. On the whole, it is strange that such a raid was not launched before. The authorities have been aware for some time that in New York alone some £40,000,000 were being paid annually to the city's "racketeers," while no adequate proportion of this sum was finding its way into the State's revenue. No doubt, legal difficulties of a technical sort will exist in the taxation of illegal profits, but things have come to such a pass in the United States that any undue niceness, however pedantically proper, must be held to be out of place. We learn that the alarmed "gangsters" have retained a prominent firm of income tax experts in New York to watch over their interests.

RIVAL TO HOSPITALS' SWEEPSTAKES.

HEADQUARTERS IN DUBLIN AND MASSACHUSETTS.

PROMINENT POLITICIANS AS PROMOTERS.

PROBLEM FOR LAW OFFICERS OF THE FREE STATE.

"IRISH TIMES" SPECIAL NEWS.

A RIVAL to the Irish Hospitals' Trust sweepstakes has made its appearance, with Irish headquarters in Dublin and American headquarters in the State of Massachusetts. It is called the "Irish Charitable Sweepstake in aid of the Gaedhealtachta," and the Law Officers of the Free State Government are at present considering the legal aspect of its existence.

The names of a number of persons prominently identified with advanced politics in the Free State appear on the back of the ticket, and it has been stated on their behalf that it is not the intention to sell tickets in Ireland. Whether or not this intention will save them from legal proceedings remains to be seen.

This sweepstake is being organised in connection with the Cambridgeshire, which will be run on October 28th next, and it is stated that thirty per cent. of the proceeds will be allocated to the "Gaedhealtachta"—which might be construed to mean all Ireland, North and South, and not merely the Irish-speaking areas.

TICKETS ALREADY ON SALE IN THE U.S.A.

A SWEEPSTAKE on the Cambridgeshire, which the promoters hope will rival the sweepstakes run by the Hospitals' Trust, Ltd., is being organised in the Irish Free State and in the United States of America, and already tickets are on sale in many parts of the U.S.A.

This sweepstake is known as the "Irish Charitable Sweepstake in aid of the Gaedhealtachta," and the promoters are the Gaedhealtachta Trust.

The headquarters of this Trust are in Dublin, and a large building in Upper O'Connell street has been taken over as offices at a rent that is stated to be £2,400 The premises are at present being reconditioned inside.

NOT SANCTIONED.

This sweepstake has no Government sanction. The Civic Guard authorities, it is known, have been conducting investigations in connection with it, and they have forwarded all the papers to the Government Law Officers for their consideration.

The promoters of the sweepstake have stated that it is not their intention to sell tickets in Ireland, though tickets will be sold on a large scale in the United States, in Great Britain and, in fact, all over the world.

The problem that the Law Officers have to decide is whether, under these circumstances, the organisation of this sweepstake infringes the laws of this country, and whether proceedings should be instituted against the promoters.

DISTRIBUTION OF PRIZES.

The sweepstake is being organised on a big scale, with a prize distribution similar to that of the sweepstakes organised by the Hospitals' Trust. After the deduction of all expenses, thirty per cent. of the proceeds, it is announced will go to the "Gaedhealtachta" and the other seventy per cent. will be distributed in prizes.

The prize fund will be divided into as many units of £100,000 as it will permit. Each unit of £100,000 will be divided as follows:—

Five drawers of the winning horse will divide 30 per cent. (£30,000).

Five drawers of the second horse will divide 15 per cent. (£15,000).

Five drawers of the third horse will divide 10 per cent. (£10,000).

Drawers of all other horses accepted for the race will divide 10 per cent. (£10,000).

In addition there will be 350 cash prizes of £100 each (35 per cent. or £35,000).

SMALL INDIVIDUAL WINS.

An important departure from the scheme of distribution of the sweepstakes run by the Hospitals' Trust is that for each unit of £100,000, five counterfoils will be drawn for each horse.

This means that in each unit there will be (as shown above) five first prizes, five second prizes, five third prizes and that the £10,000 to be shared between the drawers of all other horses in the race will be divided among five times as many people as there are horses accepted, other than the first second and third.

This means that the amount received by the drawers of horses other than the first, second and third, will be rather small. The drawers of the winning horse will only receive £6,000 each; the drawers of the second horse, £3,000 each, and the drawers of the third horse, £2,000 each.

THE TICKETS.

No statement has been made as to the total that this sweepstake is expected to reach. The tickets are of the same type as those for the sweepstakes organised by the Hospitals' Trust. They are oblong in shape, but slightly longer and are coloured in soft shades of green and red.

Instead of a nurse, as in the Hospitals' Trust tickets, the water-mark on the paper shows an Irish labourer working on the land, a design somewhat similar to that on some of the Free State £1 notes. The rest of the water-mark is made up of the word "Gaedhealtachta," repeated ad infinitum.

On the front of the ticket appears the inscription "Irish Charitable Sweepstake" and underneath it in Irish, "Ar son an Gaedhealtachta." After that come the particulars as to the distribution of the proceeds.

On the back of the ticket are a number of names, which include three Dublin doctors and several people well known in this country for their connection with "advanced" politics.

MYSTERIOUS OBJECT.

The purpose of this sweepstake on the Cambridgeshire, which is to be run on October 28th next, is obscure. The Gaeltacht consists of certain sections of the Free State, principally in the West, where Irish is a living language, which were marked out some years ago by the present Government, and which are being developed by them.

The question arises: Does the Gaedhealtachta referred to on these tickets mean the Irish language areas only or the whole of Ireland? An even more important point is the manner in which the thirty per cent. allocated to the Gaedhealtachta is to be appropriated. This latter question is perturbing the Law Officers of the Government.

A PUBLIC DRAW.

The promoters of this sweepstake have stated that a public draw is to be held in Dublin three or four days before the race under the supervision of the trustees of the sweepstake.

The headquarters of the "Gaedhealtachta Trust" in the United States are in the State of Massachusetts, where, the promoters claim, sweepstakes and lotteries are not illegal.

The tickets bear no printer's name, but are believed to have been printed in the United States.

Some of the tickets already have reached Dublin.

ATLANTIC FLIGHT.

TWO MEN ON THE WAY.

NEWFOUNDLAND TO GERMANY.

HARBOUR GRACE LEFT AT 5 P.M.

MR. WILEY POST and Mr. Harold Gatty, who are attempting to fly the Atlantic, arrived at Harbour Grace, Newfoundland, at 1.17 p.m. (Summer Time) yesterday. They left Roosevelt Field, New York, at 3.56 (Eastern Standard Time) yesterday morning.

They took in six hundred gallons of petrol and started on their main flight at five o'clock.

The personal representatives of Mr. Post and Mr. Gatty state that they will not call at London, but will try and fly direct from Newfoundland to Berlin.

Their course lies round a great circle to the northern tip of Ireland, then across Scotland and the North Sea.

If, however, the weather is too unfavourable for this after they reach Ireland they will turn south to the French coast and then proceed to Germany.

The Danish airmen, Hobris and Hilligare, are at Harbour Grace, waiting to take off for Denmark.

Messrs. Post and Gatty hope to make a twenty-five thousand miles' flight in seven days, including calls at Moscow and several places in Siberia.

INTREPID AIR GIRL'S MISHAP.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
ST. JOHN (NEW BRUNSWICK), Tuesday.

Miss Ruth Nichols, the American Society air girl, had her hopes of being the first woman to make a successful solo flight across the Atlantic rudely dashed to the ground when she crashed here yesterday, injured herself, and smashed her machine at the conclusion of the first leg of her trans-Atlantic flight.

"All O.K.," she telegraphed to her mother after she had been admitted to hospital here last night, suffering from a wrenched back, shock and various bruises.

Miss Nichols had set out yesterday afternoon at 3.22 from New York for here, but with the sun in her eyes on arrival she made a faulty landing.

The X-ray examination of Miss Nichols shows that with the exception of the damage to her spine, she suffered no internal injuries. The doctor who conducted the examination states that as soon as the general soreness, consequent on the crash, has worn off, Miss Nichols will be tightly bandaged and sent home.

THE NAUTILUS IN CORK.

SIR H. WILKINS ENTERTAINED.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.
CORK, Tuesday.

In connection with the arrival of the Polar submarine, Nautilus, Sir Hubert Wilkins and several members of the exploration party were to-day entertained to lunch by the Cork Harbour Board. The lunch took place at the Victoria Hotel, Cork.

Sir Hubert Wilkins, in a very interesting speech, paid a striking tribute to the port of Cork. There was scarcely one port in four hundred, he said, where they could have obtained equal facilities for the recharging of their batteries. In Cork all was ready for them, and they were able to proceed with the work as soon as the submarine moored at the quayside.

These facilities were all the more welcome when it was remembered that time was a vital factor to them. The Arctic waited for no man, and there must be only the minimum of delay if success were to be obtained. He was deeply grateful for the help and hospitality of the people of Cork.

Continuing, Sir Hubert outlined the purpose of his expedition, and laid emphasis on the fact that it was not merely an adventure, but had a severely practical side. It was intended to carry out scientific investigation in the Polar regions on a scale never previously attempted. Many explorers, starting from Peary's time, had visited the Pole, but none of them had been able to take an adequate amount of scientific apparatus for their experiments.

The object of the Nautilus expedition, Sir Hubert said, was to try and establish a centre in the Arctic from which meteorological experiments could be conducted. Foreknowledge of weather conditions was essential in commerce, and this could be obtained by the establishment of observation posts in various parts of the world. A station in the Polar regions was very desirable from this point of view.

There were great difficulties, however, particularly in the North Polar region, where there were few islands on which a station could be set up.

SEARCH FOR AN ISLAND.

In 1913, Sir Hubert said, when he went to the Arctic with Stefanson, the latter had suggested that a submarine might be used to carry scientific equipment under the ice to an island. At the time Sir Hubert thought that that would be too slow, and favoured the idea of using an aeroplane to explore the Arctic, and to find out if there were any islands suitable for their purpose; but in 1925, when he flew over those regions, he was unable to discover any islands at all. There remained the question whether the station could be set up on the floating ice. In order to see if this was possible it was necessary to examine the area during the summer months, and the only way to do so was by submarine.

If they could establish a station in the Arctic they would be able to forecast the weather accurately for several months ahead, and the commercial advantages of this were obvious. This, it was hoped might be the first of several stations in various parts of the world.

HOPING FOR SUCCESS.

In concluding his speech Sir Hubert referred to a remark of Commander Danenhowers at the start of the present expedition. "We know you are airminded," the Commander had said, "but before you've finished this trip you'll be sub-conscious." Whatever happened, Sir Hubert said, they intended to go through with it, and no effort would be spared to ensure their success.

Commander Danenhowers, Mr. Richard Wallace and the Lord Mayor also spoke.

Other members of the Nautilus's crew present were:—Commander Isaac Schlossbach, chief engineer; R. D. Shaw, chief electrician; A. O. Blumberg, D. Crilley, and R. Mayers, chief radio operator.

Mr. H. Nalder, in a short speech, stated that the Electricity Board were going to provide the Nautilus with a free supply of current, and would make no charge for any other services to the vessel.

ELECTRICITY SUPPLY.

QUESTIONS IN THE DAIL.

MINISTER'S EXPECTED STATEMENT.

BY OUR POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT.

THE following question appears, in the name of Mr. Briscoe (F.F.), on the order paper for to-day's meeting of the Dail:—

"To ask the Minister for Finance whether he has received any demand from the Electricity Supply Board for any part of the sums of £46,302 and £596,312, being balances respectively authorised to be paid to the Board under Sections 12 (2) (as amended) and 12 (3) respectively of the Electricity Supply Act, 1927."

Last week another question was asked bearing on the financial relations between the Government and the Electricity Supply Board. It is an unsatisfactory method of obtaining information on a matter of this kind, and from every point of view it seems desirable that Mr. McGilligan, Minister for Industry and Commerce, should take an early opportunity of making his promised statement on the whole circumstances which led to the resignations of Dr. McLaughlin, Managing Director, and Mr. J. J. Murphy (former Chairman) from the Board. This is particularly the case when, as is inevitable, the public will make deductions which, based on piecemeal information, may ultimately be found to be erroneous.

MR. COSGRAVE'S PROMISE.

Over a month ago, during Mr. McGilligan's absence in Geneva, President Cosgrave, replying to a question put by Mr. Lemass, said that Mr. McGilligan would shortly lay before the House proposals regarding the Shannon scheme, and would take that opportunity of making a full statement on the subject. Last Wednesday, in reply to a question, Mr. McGilligan was unable to say when his statement would be made.

It is known that the next step in connection with the Shannon development is due to be taken soon, and if the necessary legislation is to be passed in the present session—which has now probably not more than three weeks to run—its early introduction would seem to be indicated.

BODENSTOWN.

THE CANCELLED TRAINS.

Among other questions to be put in the Dail to-day is one by Deputy Mullins to the Minister for Justice, asking whether he is aware that considerable uneasiness exists in the minds of many people in consequence of his action in ordering the Great Southern Railways Company to cancel the trains scheduled to run to Bodenstown for the Wolfe Tone commemoration on Sunday last, and also in consequence of the appearance in the streets on that day of a large body of troops in full war kit; and if he will state the reasons for this action.

ROSCOMMON FLOODS.

Mr. Gerald Boland has a couple of questions for the Minister for Finance, on the subject of flooding and consequent destruction of crops in the County Roscommon.

Mr. M. P. Connolly will ask the Minister for Posts and Telegraphs regarding the proposed high-power broadcasting station at Athlone, and whether a site has yet been selected.

BILLS IN PROGRESS.

The bills on the paper include The Trade Loans (Guarantee) Bill, second stage; Dairy Produce Bill, second stage; Local Government Bill in Committee; the Agricultural Produce (Potatoes) Bill, Committee; the Town Tenants Bill, Committee, and the Finance Bill, second stage.

THE WAVERTREE ELECTION.

CONSERVATIVE MAJORITY INCREASED.

The result of the polling in the Wavertree (Liverpool) by-election was declared last night:—

Mr. A. R. NALL-CAIN (Conservative)	18,687
Mr. S. L. Treleaven (Labour)	10,042
Majority	8,645

The figures at the general election were:—

J. A. Timme (Conservative)	16,880
S. L. Treleaven (Labour)	13,585
H. R. Rathbone (Liberal)	11,723

POTATO BLIGHT.

NOW IN TWENTY-TWO COUNTIES.

FROM OUR AGRICULTURAL CORRESPONDENT.

Three more outbreaks of potato blight were reported to the Department of Agriculture, Dublin, yesterday. One occurred near Ballina, Co. Mayo, and two in Co. Donegal, at Creeslough and Stranorlar, which had hitherto been free.

Thus there are twenty-two counties of the Irish Free State infected with potato blight, and the continuance of sultry, cloudy weather conditions points to its extension in districts already affected.

The only effective means of combating the disease is by thorough spraying with the Burgundy mixture. There is plenty of bluestone available, and if it is mixed with the proper proportion of washing soda, it will materially help to save the crop.

Bright sunshine and some wind would also be an advantage, but these are matters outside human control.

MONEY FOR "SWEEP" TICKETS.

QUESTION OF RETURN WHEN SEIZED IN POST.

Robert Holt (30), described as of Versailles road, Anerley, was summoned at Penge Police Court yesterday for selling Irish Free State Hospitals' Sweepstake tickets.

Mr. Horace Fenton, prosecuting for the police, said that a postal packet addressed to Dublin was intercepted in the post, and was found to contain two complete books of counterfoils of tickets and one single counterfoil. The packet also contained ten guineas in postal orders. When Detective Minter, of Scotland Yard, called on him, Holt said: "Yes, that is right. I sent it. I did not think it was so serious. Everybody is doing it."

Holt told the magistrates that he thought the objection was to selling tickets publicly. He had not studied the matter very much.

After Holt had been fined £1 the question of the return of the money was raised.

The Chairman—We are of the opinion that we have no power to make an order to that effect, but we are also of opinion that he should have his money back.

To Mr. Fenton the Chairman added—Do what you think best.

SMOKE COLUMN OF DEATH.

CORDITE WORKS' EXPLOSION.

TEN WORKMEN KILLED.

NINETEEN OTHERS INJURED.

TEN men were killed and nineteen injured in an explosion in the nitrating house at the Royal Naval cordite factories, Holton Heath, near Wareham, Dorset, at about 10.45 yesterday morning. The ten killed, it was officially stated, are almost certain to have been blown to pieces.

The explosion, which destroyed the washing house, the distributing house and the paste-mixing house, was followed by fire, and the effect was felt more than two miles away.

SCENE OF DESOLATION.

The explosion was felt and heard over twenty miles away, and relatives of the employés quickly gathered outside the iron gates of the factory anxious for news. From the centre of the establishment thick, acrid masses of blood-red smoke covered the sky. All work in the factory was immediately stopped, and hands who had escaped unhurt were speedily recruited as stretcher-bearers.

The scene a few seconds after the crash was one of utter desolation, although the immediate effects of the explosion had been confined to a comparatively small area owing to the protective earthworks which are a feature of the lay-out of the factory. Factory and other ambulances were going in a continuous stream to and from the Poole Hospital.

Commander P. Hammond, superintendent of the factory, stated:—"After the explosion a sulphuric acid tank burst and the acid ran down a slope into the place where the fire was raging. It was a marvel that only one man suffered from acid burns."

BUILDINGS SHAKEN MILES AWAY.

William Diffy, who lives two miles away, said that he was going into his garden at the time and the force of the explosion took a hoe out of his hand and threw him against a tree nearby.

One man sitting in his house about two miles away was knocked out of his chair by the force of the explosion. Other people in the vicinity thought that it was an earthquake.

The post office building at Wareham, three miles away, shook for several minutes. When women-folk besieged the factory gates, one woman was heard to remark to her husband, "You dreamt last night that there was to be an explosion, Bill, and it has come true. Thank God, you got out of it."

An eye-witness stated that flames leaped to a height of a hundred feet.

The factory has its own fire brigade, and it was owing to the splendid work of the men that the flames were prevented from spreading. Buildings containing cordite were comparatively near. Had the fire reached them the havoc would have been infinitely worse.

THE KING'S SYMPATHY.

The following announcement was made at the Admiralty last night: "His Majesty the King has given instructions that his deepest sympathy and that of Her Majesty the Queen is to be conveyed to the dependents of those who lost their lives in the Holton Heath explosion, and he has requested to be kept informed of the progress of those who were injured."

BRAVE DOCTORS AND NURSES.

A member of the No. 11 (Dorset) Detachment of the Red Cross said: "In spite of the risks doctors and nurses bravely carried through their mission of mercy. Factory workers joined with us in our task of aiding the injured. A shed in the factory was converted into a temporary mortuary."

An official at the Council offices at Wareham said that the explosion shook the whole town, and people all rushed into the streets. A strange orange-red glow near the bottom of the smoke column could be clearly seen.

An explosion occurred at the same factory in November, 1929, and resulted in serious injury to one worker, while three others were slightly injured.

3,000LB. OF EXPLOSIVES.

About 3,000 lb. of nitro-glycerine are said to have been actually in course of preparation at the time. The men engaged in this specialised work are instructed never to take their eyes off the thermometer which records the temperature. If there is a possibility of the temperature going above 24 centigrade or going below 10 centigrade, they at once release a lever which plunges the mixture into "the drowning pit"—a tank of water which ensures complete immunity from explosion by negativing the acid. Brine tubes encircle the mixture, and their pressure is varied according to the temperature.

The whole structure has been completely demolished, and it will be extremely difficult to ascertain the precise cause of the disaster.

The Royal Naval Cordite Factory employs between 1,400 and 1,600 people. They work in sheds, which are protected from each other by earth-works similar to dug-outs. Each shed is completely isolated from the others. Although the explosion yesterday was of such extraordinary force the strong earth banks prevented the fire from spreading to other buildings.

LATE NEWS.

BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH "THE TIMES."

THE UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.

In a telegram from Pretoria yesterday, The Times Correspondent says:—Mr. Grobler, Minister of Lands, and leader of the Transvaal Nationalists, intends to submit to a party congress a scheme for electing the Governor-General of the Union by popular vote on lines similar to those by which the President of the United States is chosen.

The Governor-General, or Staatshoof (Head of State) would select Ministers, and the Government would carry on for a stipulated period, entirely independent of the Legislature. An adverse parliamentary vote would make no difference to the Government's tenure of office.

The plan is expected to attract support because of its resemblance to the old Republican system of Government. Mr. Grobler himself was a member of President Kruger's Ministry.

Much commotion has been caused in Poland by the order of the Prime Minister for cuts of from twenty to fifty per cent. in the salaries of civil servants, Army officers, railway and police officials, and the abolition of special bonuses, says Reuter.

HOOVER MORATORIUM PLAN.

FRANCE DRAFTING HER REPLY.

COUNTER-PROPOSALS TO BE MADE.

NEW BRITISH DEVELOPMENT.

THE French Ministry this morning will meet to decide the form of its reply to Mr. Hoover's moratorium proposals.

It is understood that France will not reject the Hoover scheme outright, but will make counter-proposals, with a view to safeguarding her interests.

Italy's acceptance may be made dependent upon Germany's abandonment of the Customs Union.

At Washington, however, stress is laid on Mr. Stimson's observation that "the Hoover plan is not subject to bickering," and it is felt that any French proposal for a serious change would not be well received.

In the meantime, the British Budget may be further affected by the suggestion from Australia and New Zealand—that the moratorium should apply to War debts as between constituent members of the British Empire.

"NOT SUBJECT TO BICKERING."

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
WASHINGTON, Tuesday.

While awaiting France's action in regard to President Hoover's proposal, high authorities of the State Department revealed to-day that France was the first country notified when the President decided to act. She was acquainted with the fact last Friday. There was no preliminary discussion of the plan with any other nation, but President Hoover had been following the situation in Germany keenly, and he acted when the financial crisis indicated that disaster was imminent unless he did so.

Administration officials have not received any official information that France intends to submit counter-proposals to the Hoover Plan, but, in view of Mr. Stimson's indication that the Hoover Plan is not to be the subject of bickering, and his remark about the urgent need for its adoption, it is considered most probable that any French proposal for a serious change of plan would be received very unfavourably in Washington.

Meanwhile, President Hoover is making a complete canvass of every member of the Senate and House of Representatives in order to ascertain their attitude towards the proposal. The White House has given no indication as to how complete the canvass is so far, but it is said that more than 50 per cent. of members of the two Houses have already replied.

PREPARING FRENCH REPLY.

POSSIBLE COUNTER-PROPOSALS.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
PARIS, Tuesday.

The Council of Ministers, which sat this morning under the presidency of M. Doumer to consider the French reply to Mr. Hoover's debt moratorium proposals, dispersed without taking a decision. A special meeting has been called for to-morrow.

The French reply is being drafted, but before despatching it the French Government has taken the step of discussing the various aspects of the questions involved with the Italian and Belgian Governments. There are not, however, any discussions with the British Government, presumably because Britain has already replied to Washington. In well-informed quarters it is thought that the reply will take the form of a counter-proposal, the essential aim of which will be to obtain the certainty that the Young Plan will not be affected by Mr. Hoover's moratorium.

The French Government has to face the possibility that Germany, after a year of President Hoover's moratorium, may declare that she is still unable to pay her creditors, and may claim her right, under the Young Plan, to a partial moratorium of conditional payments. The French Government, it is believed, will suggest to Mr. Hoover that Germany shall this year pay the unconditional annuity, a net amount of 612,000,000 gold marks, to the Bank for International Settlements.

According to the Intransigeant, two draft replies were before the Council of Ministers this morning. One, produced by the Quai d'Orsay, was a mere acknowledgment of Mr. Hoover's proposal; the other, the handiwork of the Minister of Finance, went into technicalities. Both were turned down, the first as being too brief, and the second as too diffuse. Hence the need for a third draft.

The French Ambassador in Washington will be instructed to communicate the details of the French counter-proposal verbally to the State Department.

NO FLAT REFUSAL.

It is not anticipated that France will send to Washington anything like a flat refusal to participate in the scheme, as full credit will be given for Mr. Hoover's excellent intentions. It is, however, probable that some explanation of the reasons which would make France's unconditional acceptance of the scheme difficult will be given.

Yesterday a suggestion was current that France might place the sum due to her by Germany as her share of the unconditional annuities under the Young Plan, amounting to something like £25,000,000, at the disposal of the Bank for International Settlements, which would be able to lend the money to those countries most badly hit by the economic crisis, France, meanwhile, issuing short-term Treasury Bonds in order to balance her Budget.

Another suggestion for a counter-scheme is put forward by the Intransigeant, which believes that a £600,000,000 loan to aid those countries whose finances will be affected by the Hoover Plan is under discussion between the European Allies and the United States. International negotiations on the subject, the paper understands, will shortly begin, the discussion on the subject being taken out of the hands of the diplomatists and technicians, who produced the Dawes Plan and the Young Plan, and placed in the hands of the bankers and big business men of all the interested nations, including Germany, who, it is suggested, will also participate in the loan.

THREE POINTS.

It is felt here that, firstly, Germany could, if she had wished, have taken advantage of the provision of the Young Plan, by which she may postpone payment for two years of virtually two-thirds of her 1931-32 reparation payments without any special international scheme being called into being. Secondly, that France cannot afford to forego her share of the unconditional payments, amounting to some 500,000,000 reichsmarks (£25,000,000); and, thirdly, that there is some risk of a new international scheme calling into question the whole structure of the Young Plan which, when it was formulated, was, France was assured, the very last alteration that would be made in reparation payments.

NEW ZEALAND'S BENEFIT.

According to a Wellington telegram, Mr. Forbes, the Prime Minister, says that the New Zealand Budget would benefit considerably, should President Hoover's scheme operate during the current year. It is officially estimated here that in a full twelve months New Zealand would be relieved of the necessity of paying over £1,000,000 if the suspension were carried out. On the one hand, New Zealand would be relieved of her annual debt payment to the mother country of £1,410,000, and, on the other hand, she would lose her share of German reparations, totalling some £330,000.

A BELGIAN VIEW.

PLAN MIGHT BE FATAL.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
BRUSSELS, Tuesday.

In the Senate to-day M. Segers, Minister of State, said that Mr. Hoover's scheme was especially generous for Germany, but it might be fatal for Belgium. They should be careful. If Germany were to be allowed to benefit by a moratorium, other countries ought to benefit by it too, and claim guarantees for the respect of treaties and the end of a system of blackmail. Payments by Germany should only be suspended in the same measure as Belgian payments to the United States were suspended, or else it would mean that they were being made fools of.

EFFECT ON BRITISH BUDGET.

INTER-EMPIRE CLAIMS.

The British Budget may, after all, have to bear a loss of some £6,000,000 under the twelve months' moratorium proposed by President Hoover; for, as the following Reuter telegrams reveal, both Australia and New Zealand evidently wish to interpret the proposal as including inter-Empire war debts within its scope. If this interpretation be accepted, Great Britain will have to forego the receipt of £3,950,000 due under this head from Australia, and £1,410,000 due from New Zealand. These sums, together with the £450,000 she already stands to lose under the moratorium proposal, would make a total loss of £5,810,000.

HOW AUSTRALIA WOULD FARE.

After referring to President Hoover's proposal as a big step towards the solution of the present world depression, says a Canberra telegram, Mr. Scullin, Commonwealth Prime Minister, said in the House of Representatives to-day that he was anxious to know whether Great Britain would extend the full benefits of the moratorium to Australia, in accordance with the spirit of the plan. Great Britain has already granted a two-year moratorium for the Sinking Fund part of Australia's debt annuity—viz., for £1,600,000, with a view to assisting her in her financial difficulties, and if the Hoover moratorium be now applied to the remaining part of Australia's debt annuity this will mean a further saving to the Commonwealth of £3,900,000, and a corresponding loss to Great Britain. Australia, on the other hand, would forfeit her share of German reparations, totalling £880,000, so that on balance she would presumably benefit to the extent of some £3,000,000.

JUMPING AT OLYMPIA.

CAPTAIN FINLAY'S GREAT ROUND.

Capt. T. P. Finlay, a member of the Irish Free State team taking part in the International Horse Show at Olympia, London, scored something in the nature of a personal triumph in the competition yesterday afternoon.

The course was an especially difficult one, and included an obstacle known as "The Railway Level Crossing," which comprises two gates within a few feet of each other. Very few of the dozens of competitors succeeded in getting over the course without a large number of faults.

Capt. Finlay rode two horses, "Moonstruck" and "Cuchulain," and with each he had only a half fault, which meant that, with one exception, he had cleared every obstacle in perfect style. He was extremely unlucky not to have made a faultless round.

His two horses were among the four which tied for first place.

THE LATE MISS SICELE O'BRIEN.

At Brompton Oratory, London, yesterday morning, a Requiem Mass was celebrated for the repose of the soul of Miss Sicele O'Brien, daughter of Sir Timothy O'Brien. She was the victim of the aeroplane crash near Hatfield last week. The Service was attended by members of the family and a number of friends.

FOOT-AND-MOUTH DISEASE.

NORTHERN BORDER CLOSED.

FREE STATE'S CLEAN BILL OF HEALTH.

FROM OUR AGRICULTURAL CORRESPONDENT.

A REPRESENTATIVE of the Northern Ireland Government informed me yesterday that it had been decided to permit the North-West of Ireland Agricultural Society to hold its annual show to-day and to-morrow.

"The position in regard to Northern Ireland," he said, "is eminently satisfactory. The disease is being confined to a radius a few miles of the original outbreak. No fresh cases have been confirmed during the past two days on any of the ten farms where the original outbreak occurred, and every precaution is being taken to stamp it out."

This, together with the fact that no trace of the disease has been found in the Irish Free State raises the hope that the fat stock trade between Great Britain and Ireland will be resumed within a reasonable time for immediate slaughter.

A FREE STATE ORDER.

The Department of Agriculture in Dublin desire to intimate for the information of all persons concerned that an order has been made prohibiting, as from the 23rd inst. inclusive, all movements of cattle, sheep, goats and other ruminating animals and swine from Northern Ireland into the Irish Free State.

One effect of this order is that no animals of the kind mentioned can be moved into the Free State from the Derry Show, to be held on the 24th and 25th inst.

THE NORTH-WEST SHOW.

The following statement was issued by the Northern Ministry of Agriculture yesterday:—

As there appears to be some doubt as to the holding of the North-West of Ireland Agricultural Society's annual show at Londonderry to-morrow, the Ministry of Agriculture wishes to point out that the restrictions which have been imposed in connection with the recent unfortunate outbreaks of foot-and-mouth disease in the Downpatrick area will not affect the holding of the Show, and that the Show will be held as arranged. Of course, no cattle, sheep, swine, etc., can be moved to the Show from or through any part of the County Down or the Belfast county borough.

WATERFORD BOARD'S REQUEST.

The Waterford Harbour Commissioners yesterday passed a resolution calling on the Department of Agriculture to re-open Waterford port for stock and lambs for immediate slaughter. Waterford port, the resolution pointed out, was free from suspicion, and added that the British and Irish Departments should co-operate more closely so as to prevent the recurrence of such incidents as the disembarkation of live-stock actually on board ship when a prohibitive order is received. It was cruel to treat cattle thus.

THE DISEASE IN ENGLAND.

ANOTHER CASE REPORTED.

Another case of foot-and-mouth disease reported from Lancashire yesterday brings the total up to 36.

Of these, 31 were stated yesterday to have been directly traced to imported Irish cattle.

The Conservative Parliamentary Agricultural Committee in England last night received from the Ministry of Agriculture a statement regarding the outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease, showing that the total number of outbreaks confirmed up to 3 p.m. yesterday is thirty-eight, distributed as follows:—

England—Cumberland, two outbreaks; Durham, one outbreak; Lancashire, fifteen outbreaks; Westmorland, two outbreaks; Yorkshire, North Riding, two outbreaks.

Scotland—Angus (Forfar), one outbreak; Fifeshire, three outbreaks; Kincardine, one outbreak; Perth and Kinross, eleven outbreaks.

Five other reported outbreaks are also under investigation. Three of these are in existing infected areas—two in Angus and one in Fife; one is in Cheshire and the fifth in Denbighshire.

The Ministry yesterday received an intimation from the Northern Ireland Government that ten outbreaks in all had been confirmed in County Down.

ROYAL VISIT TO DRURY LANE.

The King and Queen last night saw a performance of "The Land of Smiles" at Drury Lane Theatre. No announcement had been made of their visit, but a large crowd quickly gathered outside the Royal entrance at the side of the theatre, and cheered them as they entered. Their Majesties were cheered again on entering the Royal box.

ROYAL DUBLIN SOCIETY.

THE BI-CENTENARY CELEBRATIONS.

BRILLIANT OPENING CEREMONY.

THE Bi-Centenary Celebrations of the Royal Dublin Society commenced last night when a Conversazione was held at the Society's headquarters. The famous Ballsbridge premises have been the scene of many great and distinguished gatherings, but last night Ballsbridge was the stage of one of the most brilliant functions in the two centuries old life of the Society. His Majesty's representative, the heads of the State, representatives of foreign diplomatic corps, Peers, leaders of the professions, of science, art and industry foregathered in common brotherhood to mark the passing of another notable milestone in the history of this famous Society.

There were about three thousand present.

It was a metamorphosed scene which the Society's headquarters presented. The Main Hall was like the salon of a fairy palace. The flooring had been planed down until the parqueting shone up almost a bright cream. Across it were laid red-bordered carpets and ample seating accommodation was ranged round the bandstand, which had been moved to the eastern side. The balcony was also tastefully decorated, and from the lofty ceiling hung great baskets of multi-coloured flowers. Under the bright electric lights the scene during the night was brilliant.

THE RECEPTION.

Here the members and guests were received on their arrival by the President of the Society, Professor J. Joly, who was accompanied by Viscount Powerscourt, K.P., and the Viscountess Powerscourt.

During the reception a delightful programme of music was played by a string orchestra of thirty performers.

The Governor-General, Mr. McNeill, and Mrs. McNeill and party arrived, and were conducted direct to the Council Chamber, where the President of the Society extended a welcome to the Governor-General and invited him to take his seat in the famous old chair of the President, which dates back to 1756.

This done, the Governor-General was invited to unveil three tablets in marble in the Reception Hall, bearing the names, respectively, of the Presidents, Vice-Presidents and hon. secretaries of the Society since the date of its foundation, and also a memorial tablet bearing the names of those to whom the Boyle Medal has been awarded by the Society. It is interesting to note that the name of Sir John Purser Griffith appears on this list, it being the intention to award the medal to Sir John on Thursday next.

PROCESSION TO MAIN HALL.

At the request of the Governor-General, the Hon. Secretaries of the Society—Professor Adeney and Mr. Pack-Beresford—then unveiled a bust of Professor Joly, President of the Society.

The Governor-General, in a brief speech, congratulated the Society on its bi-centenary, what it had accomplished for agriculture, science, art and industry in the past, and expressed the warmest hopes for its future.

Professor Joly briefly replied, and emphasised the manner in which people of all shades of thought had come together voluntarily within the Society to work for the good of Ireland.

Afterwards, preceded by the Mace-bearer, the Governor-General, Mrs. MacNeill, and Professor Joly, headed a procession of distinguished visitors to the Main Hall, where visitors and members stood to attention whilst the orchestra played the "Soldier's Song."

Afterwards the guests dispersed through the different halls and onward to the Members' Lawn. Here the greatest miracle had been effected. A great canvas pavilion covered the entire lawn. Over the length of the grassy stretch were placed quaint rustic seats, and through the border of trees twinkled thousands of different coloured electric lamps, whilst a great chain of lights hung suspended in loops from the roof beam of the pavilion.

CARNIVAL ATMOSPHERE.

The band stand, all aglitter with lights, added to the fairy-like scene, and the bright toilettes of the ladies made the picture complete. The music of the No. 1 Army Band, under the conductorship of Colonel Fritz Brasé, and the gay animated conversation let loose over the tea-cups created an atmosphere of carnival that was Continental in its character. It was a memorable night.

The guests wandered under canvas awnings into the Main Hall Annexe, where the greatest curiosity was evinced at the many wonderful things on view. It was interesting to note the almost child-like curiosity and surprise with which staid professional men gazed at the experiments conducted for them by the many university professors who were in charge of the various sections. One well-known solicitor got endless amusement out of the sounds produced by passing a Bunsen flame under a set of long tubes.

The Drumm battery also came in for a lot of examination.

Much interest was also shown in the exhibits on the Balcony in the Main Hall, particularly in the collection loaned by the firm of Messrs. John Fower and Son. Lovers of old Dublin were much interested in the collection of directories dating back almost two centuries, and in a wonderful state of preservation.

INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITS.

In the South Hall there were some fine industrial exhibits, notably the display of Irish poplin and laces by Messrs. Atkinson, including winding and weaving machines. There was a lot of interest also taken in the display by the Dunlop firm of their pneumatic tyre development from the days of the old "penny-farthing" bicycle to the present. The huge tyre used for the monster aeroplane, and the tyres used by the late Sir Henry Segrave and Sir Malcolm Campbell on their "record" making motor runs also excited interest.

There were large audiences in the Members' Hall, where two splendid concerts were held, to which Miss Jean Nolan and Mr. Percy Whitehead (vocal soloists), Miss C. M. Townshend's Band of Singers and Harpists contributed, whilst Mrs. Edith Boxwell presided at the piano.

The whole night's programme was carried through with that efficiency which one has come to expect at all functions of the Royal Dublin Society, and the guests departed taking away lasting memories of a wonderful occasion

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S GUESTS.

The Governor-General of the Irish Free State and Mrs. McNeill are entertaining the following guests for the bi-centenary celebrations of the Royal Dublin Society:—The Marquess and Marchioness of Aberdeen, Mr. Dulanty, High Commissioner for the Irish Free State in London; Sir Edward Sharpey Schafer, Sir Arthur Hill, Professor F. O. Bower, and Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Harmsworth.

Sir E. Sharpey Schafer is President of the Royal Society of Edinburgh, Sir Arthur Hill is director of the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew, and Professor Bower is President of the British Association.

TWO CENTURIES OF PROGRESS.

EXHIBITION AT BALLSBRIDGE.

THE temporary museum which has been assembled by the Royal Dublin Society for the bi-centenary celebrations contains as varied and interesting a collection of exhibits as has ever before been housed together, demonstrating the Society's activities in the advancement of agriculture, science, art and industry over two centuries.

The exhibits are on view in the Main Hall Annexe, the South Hall and the Balcony of the Main Hall. Entering the Main Hall Annexe the first exhibits to catch the eye are the agricultural implements ranging from examples of early primitive wooden ploughs to the latest style drawn by the Fordson Tractor. There are also interesting samples of other agricultural instruments. Whilst credit for the whole advance which Irish agriculture has made in the past two centuries cannot be claimed by the Royal Dublin Society, due recognition must be made of the debt which the Irish farmer owes to this Society, which has so long and distinterestedly helped it on the road to progress.

The present exhibition shows many of the important stages in that development. The collection, whilst fairly full, is by no means exhaustive, but there are many valuable items on view, particularly those loaned by the National Museum, Dublin; the Belfast Museum, and the Science Museum, South Kensington, London.

There is also a very instructive display of matter and exhibits relating to animal production and mineral feeding of live stock.

The botany section must be of absorbing interest to the student. Here one finds a full library of publications dealing with the development of pure and applied botany in Ireland.

There are separate exhibits by the authorities of the Botanic Gardens, Glasnevin; the Linen Industry Research Association, Lambeg, Co. Antrim; the Department of Botany, Queen's University, Belfast, and by the Forest, Botany and Seed Testing Stations of the Department of Agriculture, Dublin.

Dairy science is illustrated in a varied collection from University College, Cork.

The engineering display is fascinating, as is always the case where so many models are seen in action.

There is in this section a wealth of instructive material. There are, for instance, old wooden pipes used for some hundreds of years to carry Dublin's water supply, and also the diving bell and float used for the building of the Quay walls on the River Liffey. Another reminder of a quaint and rather original railway system is found in the series of illustrations and short history of the "Atmospheric Railway," which plied between Kingstown and Dalkey for eleven years between 1843 and 1854—a most ingenious piece of engineering. There is also on view a fine model of the hydro-electric power station at Ardnacrusha, with some magnificent aerial photographs of the entire Shannon Scheme taken by the Free State Flying Corps.

The fisheries display is full of informative matter in connection with this once thriving industry, and there are some delightful models of the different kinds of craft in use round the Irish shores.

In some respects the most interesting section of the museum is the Zoology section, which contains a wonderful aquarium. The aquarium consists of a darkened room, to which light is admitted only through glass tanks in the walls. The tanks contain sea or fresh water, and are kept at proper cold temperature by refrigerating tubes in which cold brine is circulating in freezing coils attached to a Frigidaire plant. Within the tanks may be seen sponges, sea firs, anemones, sea squirts, sea urchins, rosy feather stars, and other forms of marine life. Some specimens of sea horses have been kindly presented by Sir Peter Chalmers Mitchell and Mr. Edward Boulenger from the Zoological Society of London, while another interesting exhibit is an octopus, presented by Dr. E. J. Allen, Director of the British Marine Biological Association.

Pork Prices Dropping.

The price of pork at Enniskillen and Cavan markets yesterday was lower than pre-war figures. At Cavan there were fewer than two dozen pigs in the market, and only 56s. per cwt. was offered. At Enniskillen the number was 95, and 54s. per cwt. was the highest price paid.

At Callan pig market yesterday fat pigs fetched 50s. per cwt., a decrease of 2s. on last week's price.

At Armagh market pork was selling at 57s. per cwt., a decrease of 3s. on last week's market.

The price of pigs at Tullamore yesterday fell to 39s. per cwt., live-weight.

IRELAND'S LINK WITH FRANCE.

SIGNING OF FIRST TREATY.

CLOSER BOND OF UNION.

THE Treaty of Commerce and Navigation between France and the Irish Free State was signed in the Council Chamber, Government Buildings, Dublin, yesterday, by M. Alphand, the French Minister, and Mr. P. McGilligan, the Free State Minister for External Affairs.

The French Minister on his arrival at Government Buildings was saluted by a special guard of honour and received at the entrance by officials of the Department of External Affairs.

At the signing of the Treaty the following were present:—

Mr. F. McGilligan, M. Alphand, M. Gaucheron (Secretary of the French Legation), M. André Leprévost (Commercial Attaché), Mr. Diarmuid O'Hegarty, Lord Glenavy (Secretary, Department of Industry and Commerce), Mr. Ferguson (Department of Industry and Commerce), Mr. J. P. Walshe (Secretary, Department of External Affairs), Mr. Sean Murphy (Assistant Secretary, Department of External Affairs), Mr. John Hearne (Legal Adviser, Department of External Affairs), Mr. John Belton (Department of External Affairs), Mr. T. Cleary (Assistant Secretary, Revenue Commission), Mr. P. Hughes (Assistant Secretary, Revenue Commission).

A lunch, given in honour of the occasion by Mr. P. McGilligan, took place at Jammet's Restaurant. The Minister, proposing the toast of the French Republic, said:—

"I should be sorry to allow the occasion of the signing of the first Treaty between Ireland and France to pass without noting its historic import. At different times in past centuries we have made agreements with France for war-like purposes. In pursuance of such agreements French soldiers fought and shed their blood in this island with us against a country which was then our common enemy, and which has since—with the vicissitudes of time—become our common friend. During the same period of history many thousands of Irish soldiers fought and died in the armies of France on the Continent. The Great War and its train of suffering and sacrifice on the part of all the countries of Europe has brought us into a new era in which we are all united in a common effort to establish permanent peace. Friendly economic agreements of the type just signed between ourselves and France are amongst the best instruments for attaining that end.

CO-OPERATION RENEWED.

This Treaty, however, does something more for us in Ireland than symbolise the methods of the new era. Coming after the establishment of diplomatic relations between our two countries, it is a further step on the road to renewed co-operation and friendship in a new and better sphere of action with our oldest friend amongst the nations of the world. I feel that friendship between our two nations is something instinctive and permanent which no passing misunderstanding can trouble, and I wish to use this opportunity to pay a warm tribute to Monsieur Alphand for the truly admirable fashion in which he has worked—and very successfully worked—to bring our two peoples closer together and to make his country better known and loved in Ireland.

The following is the translation of Monsieur Alphand's reply:—

I wish to thank your Excellency very cordially for what you have said, and for the stirring memories which you have evoked on the occasion of the signature of the Treaty between France and Ireland. While reflecting on the fact that Irish and French soldiers have from the beginning fought side by side on the field of battle, it is very fortunate to be able to recognise that in a sphere of action destined to achieve the pacific organisation of the world Ireland and France are fighting the good fight in the councils of the nations. And France feels a very keen satisfaction on seeing near her, helping her in her efforts, her dear friends, who are reconciled after the long struggle which had divided them.

ANTICIPATED BENEFITS.

Agreements of the kind which we have just signed, concluded without any political arrière-pensée, are indeed the best instruments for forging permanent peace. It is my earnest desire that this Treaty may bring back the time when French ships used to come in great numbers to the Irish coast, bringing to this island the produce of French industry. It is also my earnest hope that this Treaty may intensify our direct postal and transport relations, increase our commercial exchanges, and make known to our tourists your wonderful country, and pour out with our French wine a little of our Southern sun, and renew finally those secular bonds which unite us in spirit and tradition.

I should like to associate with the making of this Treaty the names of the principal negotiators. On the Irish side, Messrs. Ferguson, O'Cleary and Hughes, as well as your Minister in Paris, Count O'Kelly, and on the French side Messrs. Elbel, Coulondre and Arnal, without forgetting our Commercial Attaché, M. Leprévost. If I did not protest against the very flattering manner in which your Excellency described my modest efforts it is because they have been rendered possible only by the friendly help and affectionate kindliness which you have shown to me, and also by the good-will which I have met with in all the members of the Government of the Irish Free State, and, indeed, in all Irishmen.

OBITUARY.

MR. ANDREW GIBSON.

The death took place yesterday at his residence, Lansdowne road, Belfast, at the age of 89, of Mr. Andrew Gibson, for many years Irish manager of G. and J. Burns, Ltd., the well-known shipowners. A native of Ayrshire, Mr. Gibson came to Belfast a comparatively young man, and soon proved himself a personality not merely in the commercial life of the city, but in its literary and social activities. He was for more than a decade a member of the Belfast Harbour Board. He was a governor of the Belfast Library and the Society for Promoting Knowledge, and some time ago presented to the library his "Collection of Burns and Burnsiana," one of the most extensive and discriminating private collections of works concerning the Scottish poet.

A President of the Belfast Burns Club, Mr. Gibson was a Fellow of the Royal Society of Antiquaries in Ireland. It was his privilege to possess a unique copy of "Lalla Rookh," the only one of Moore's poems which was separately printed in Belfast. He published in 1927 an important volume, entitled "New Light on Allan Ramsay," which was the outcome of years of patient and careful research.

Mr. Gibson is survived by one son and three daughters. The son is Mr. William K. Gibson, the well-known solicitor, who was formerly a member of the Belfast City Council, and for many years a prominent amateur player of Association football.

COLONEL G. M. V. HUNT.

The death took place yesterday of Colonel Godfrey Massy Vere Hunt, of Ardcairn, Bray, County Wicklow, who served in the South African War from 1899 to 1902. Colonel Hunt took part in almost all the principal operations during the war, including the relief of Ladysmith, the actions at Spion Kop, Laing's Nek, and in the Orange River Colony. He was mentioned in despatches, and received the Queen's Medal with six clasps and the King's Medal with two clasps. Colonel Hunt retired from the Army more than twenty years ago.

THE REV. SIR E. H. D. COLT.

The Rev. Sir Edward Harry Dutton Colt, eighth Baronet, died yesterday at his residence, Oakmead, Exeter, aged eighty. For many years he and Lady Colt have been living in Exeter in retirement, and have been supporters of many philanthropic organisations.

APPEAL AGAINST IMPRISONMENT.

(BEFORE THE CHIEF JUSTICE, MR. JUSTICE SULLIVAN AND MR. JUSTICE O'BYRNE.)

Lawrence Curtis, an elderly man, who had been sentenced in the Dublin Circuit Court to four months' imprisonment, with hard labour, on a charge of larceny, applied in person yesterday for leave to appeal.

The Court allowed him out on his own bail in £10 to keep the peace and be of good behaviour for two years.

IRISH LABOUR CONFERENCE.

PREPARING FOR THE ELECTIONS.

FROM OUR POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT.

THE first annual Conference of the Irish Labour Party since its reorganisation as a purely political group separated from the industrial wing will be held at 36 Parnell square, Dublin, on Friday and Saturday next. A report from the Administrative Council for the year will be submitted. This report is mainly a review of the party's political activities, and of the position as it now stands.

The party has twelve representatives in the Dail and three in the Senate; and the report indicates that it is preparing to make a strong fight to improve its position at the coming general election. No fewer than forty-four prospective candidates are on their list, and this number is expected to increase.

Senator Johnson has undertaken the work of assisting members of the party in both Houses which was formerly done by Mr. R. J. P. Mortished, when he was assistant secretary to the Labour Party.

RELATIONS WITH OTHER PARTIES.

The report deals at some length with the relations of the Labour deputies with the other parties in the Dail, pointing out that the party is altogether independent of any of these, notwithstanding allegations frequently made by Fianna Fail deputies that Labour constantly supports the Government Party. There were 65 divisions from February of this year to the date of the report, and in two of these Cumann na nGaedheal and Fianna Fail went into the same lobby against the Labour Party, and on nine occasions Labour voted with Cumann na nGaedheal against Fianna Fail. On no less than fifty occasions Labour deputies found themselves in the same lobby as Fianna Fail.

"These figures," says the report, "should dispose of the allegations and the insinuations which are being made by Fianna Fail propagandists, not on public platforms where they can be contradicted, but by way of statements made behind closed doors or in the course of conversation, canvassing, etc. It would be well to say, however, lest there should be any misunderstanding, that these figures must not be taken to mean that this party was fully, or even in the main, in agreement with the Fianna Fail point of view in all these issues. The Labour Party's action was decided, not by what Fianna Fail thought, or what Cumann na nGaedheal thought, but by the merits of the particular question as it appeared to the party."

THE ELECTION OF PRESIDENT.

The idea is further elaborated by reference to the Labour Party's attitude two years ago when, following the Government defeat, there was an election for President of the Executive Council.

"It was known," it says, "that the leader of the Fianna Fail as well as the leader of the Cumann na nGaedheal Party would be a candidate. The Labour Party considered their position in this eventuality, and came to the decision that they could not support the nomination of a Fianna Fail President and Ministry. It was decided, therefore, to nominate the leader of the Labour Party for the Presidency, and to vote against the nominees of the other parties. In the debate the Labour Party's position was made abundantly clear by the speeches of the leader and of other members of the party."

The Administrative Council, as prescribed by the Constitution, has set up a joint Council with the Labour Party of Northern Ireland, in order to maintain close contact with the North. The Council consists of three persons, and meets alternately in Dublin and Belfast.

TRANSPORT PROBLEM.

Notice has been given of a number of resolutions to be proposed at the Conference. One of these submitted by the Railway Clerks' Association states:—"This Conference declares that it is only through a comprehensive, co-ordinated system of transport, linking up all forms of rail, water, road and air services, and operating under a Ministry of Transport, that the industrial and social needs of the community can be effectively met."

It adds:—"In view of the rapid and increasing development of road motor transport, of which there is no effective national or local regulation or control, resulting in chaotic transport conditions, involving waste, disregard of public safety and sweated labour, the Conference deplores the failure of the Government to give any attention to this urgent problem, demands the introduction of immediate legislation providing for the State acquisition of the railways, to be worked in the interests of the community, and the strict regulation and control of all other forms of transport, and instructs the Labour Party representatives in the Oireachtas to take all the steps considered necessary to bring about this much-needed reform."

MRS. HEARN FOUND NOT GUILTY.

EMOTIONAL SCENE IN THE DOCK.

MRS. SARAH ANN HEARN was found not guilty at Bodmin yesterday of the murder of Mrs. Alice Maud Thomas (47), wife of a farmer, at Lawannick. The Crown offered no evidence on the charge relating to the death of Miss Lydia Maria Everard, Mrs. Hearn's sister. On the judge's direction, the jury returned a verdict of not guilty on this charge also. Mrs. Hearn was then discharged.

The judge's summing up occupied four and a quarter hours. The jury were absent fifty-four minutes, and there was no demonstration when they announced their verdict.

Mrs. Hearn was deathly white while the foreman of the jury read out the verdict, and was hardly able to walk from the dock. She left the Court supported by the nurse and a wardress. She said to her solicitor, after the verdict, "I knew they would find me innocent. I want to go away and forget everything." She evaded the large crowd outside the Court by a ruse. Her sister, Mrs. Poskitt, exchanged her red hat and blue coat for Mrs. Hearn's brown clothes. Then Mrs. Hearn was driven through the crowds in an open racing car. When Mr. Walter West, the defending solicitor, appeared in a car, with Mrs. Poskitt at his side, the crowd cheered with tremendous enthusiasm, but were cheering the wrong woman.

Mrs. Poskitt, whose face bore marks of the deep anxiety through which she had passed during the last few months, said to a Press representative: "I have prayed for Annie every day, night and morning. I have believed in her all through. I have always been quite convinced that she could not have done such a dreadful thing."

THE SUMMING-UP.

In summing up, Mr. Justice Roche told the jury that they were trying Mrs. Hearn solely on the charge of killing Mrs. Thomas by administering arsenic. The first question was: "Was death caused by arsenical poisoning?" If they decided it was not, then the second question—"Was it the act of the accused person?"—did not arise. Evidence that Mrs. Hearn was an excellent nurse and a devoted sister was much in her favour. The fact that Miss Everard was a delicate and ailing woman was also in her favour. Describing the sandwiches as "the very kernel in this case," the Judge said: "If you are not satisfied that the arsenic was put in the sandwich by Mrs. Hearn, you should acquit her."

Regarding the main question of whether Mrs. Hearn administered poison to Mrs. Thomas, his lordship said that he did not suppose the jury had any doubt in their minds, whatever other doubts they might have, that the issue was down to two people—Mrs. Hearn and Mr. Thomas. "It lies between them," he said. "I do not suppose any other person can occur to you. It is no use beating about the bush or declining to face facts. To my mind it does lie between these two people. Here, as elsewhere, it is for the prosecution to satisfy you that it was not Mr. Thomas. It is for the defence to satisfy you that it was."

If at the end of this case you cannot say which it is, you ought to acquit Mrs. Hearn just as if you were trying Mr. Thomas you would have to acquit him.

Tears were streaming down Mrs. Hearn's face, and she almost collapsed when the judge had concluded his summing up.

U.S. MARKETS.

PROFIT-TAKING DEVELOPS.

REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.

NEW YORK, Tuesday.

Indications that the recent rapid advance had undoubtedly impaired the technical position created weakness at the opening. The market was subjected to extensive profit-taking in quieter trading, but the losses of 1 to 3 points were eliminated or reduced before mid-day. Meanwhile, brokerage circles pointed out the possibility of a moderate secondary reaction before the market consolidates its position. Stocks again turned heavy in the early afternoon, and declines of 1 to 3 points were numerous, but Motion Picture issues and Coppers displayed firmness, the latter on the improvement in the commodity price and large export sales.

The action of the market was generally in keeping with expectations, and, moreover, some financial interests were inclined to expect narrow movements pending quarterly dividends and earnings announcements.

Wall street circles were still highly optimistic over the prospects of war debt relief, although the delayed decision by France added a note of uncertainty.

Later in the day there was a renewal of profit-taking and short selling, but Coppers and Oils met with support. The market closed easy.

Corns Between Toes Lifted Right Out

New Oxygen treatment ends 20 years' agony.

If your life is being made miserable by corns—you certainly won't attempt to decorate your feet with old-fashioned plasters—you won't cause untold soreness and invite blood-poisoning by cutting your corns. There is no need to treat each corn in turn. Be modern—take advantage of scientific discoveries—treat all your corns at once—with pain relieving Radox Footbaths, which soften all your corns at the same time. The actual lifting-out of the corns when Radox has loosened the roots is merely a matter of moments. Read this letter:

"For 20 years I have been suffering with corns between my toes. I tried everything I saw advertised. Being a gamekeeper, I had to do a lot of walking in the greatest misery. At last I tried Radox. I used half a gallon of water as hot as I could bear my feet in, with the usual amount of Radox. I am thankful to say it settled my corns, and I can now walk as well as ever. I had the Radox footbath every night. At the end of the first week I found the corns yielding to treatment; I kept it up for another three weeks, but only every other night, and at the end of that time my corns were completely cured."

Edward Burgess,
Warleigh, Station Road,
Addlestone, Surrey.

14th April, 1931.

Three footbaths with Radox usually loosen ordinary corns so that they can be lifted out—obstinate corns may take four or five nights. Hard, ugly skin on heels and soles of feet is gently soaked away, too. Harmful acids and poisons which cause soreness, burning, and irritation are drawn out. Your feet are left smooth as silk, healthy, hardy, happy.

CIVIL SERVANTS AND THEIR SALARIES.

THE COST OF LIVING BONUS.

At a meeting held in Jury's Hotel, Dublin, on Monday night, under the auspices of the Civil Service Federation, references were made to the recent Dail debate on the cost of living bonus.

Mr. P. Broderick, vice-chairman, who presided, stated that civil servants deeply regretted that the Dail had not thought fit to set up a Commission of Inquiry into the cost of living bonus. He felt that decision was reached because deputies did not fully appreciate the hardships and injustices inflicted by the existing system.

Mr. H. J. Smith (Taxes) referred to a statement made in the Dail that over 11,000 civil servants were in receipt of the full cost of living bonus. This, he pointed out, meant that all these people were in receipt of gross salaries, including bonus of £3 per week or less. Referring to the impending "cut" of two twenty-sixths, he stated that this would amount to about 3s. 6d. on a total remuneration of £3 per week, and the poorly-paid officials could not afford to lose this amount. Public opinion, he thought, would be in favour of the suspension of further "cuts" in the bonus of the lower grades

THE INDEX FIGURE.

Mr. M. J. Gallagher (Editor, Civil Service Journal) said that in the course of the Dail debate a great deal of attention had been given to the compilation of the index figure. Sufficient attention was not, however, drawn to the fact that its application to Civil Service salaries was, in the case of large numbers, most unsatisfactory. In the case of all remuneration in excess of 35s. per week, drastic reductions were made in the bonus which would be payable on the full application of the index figure. The Minister for Industry and Commerce had stated that, as a civil servant never enjoyed the benefit of any industrial boom, it was only equitable that he should be spared the rigours of industrial depression. The operation of the cost of living bonus system had now reached a stage where dire hardships and unforeseen injustices were being inflicted on numerous civil servants.

Mr. P. F. Walls (Taxes) said that the Government spokesmen apparently would regard it as a terrible state of affairs if Irish civil servants were in a better position in connection with the bonus than British civil servants. It was noticeable that the Department of Finance was always ready to quote British precedents when it suited its purpose, but when they favoured the staffs' claims civil servants were told that what happened in England was of no relevance.

THE CLAIM FOR ARBITRATION.

Mr. T. J. Hughes (Secretary, Civil Service Federation) said that in the course of the Dail debate stress had been laid upon the many advantages enjoyed by civil servants as compared with other workers. This was an attempt to prejudice the Service claim on the bonus. In their claim for arbitration they could not be more reasonable than they had shown themselves. Arbitration cut both ways. Civil servants could lose as well as win under it, and even where the arbitrator found in their favour they accepted the position that the Dail was free to reject the award. The money earned by civil servants was spent in the country and was used in bringing up good Irish citizens. There was an impression abroad that civil servants were people whom it was impossible to satisfy, and that they were always clamouring for improvements on already good conditions. That was not the case.

The further consideration of the matter was left over to a date to be arranged later.

THE "TIN" BODY AND THE "COACHBUILT" ONE.

Every motorist knows the immense difference in value between the motor body, colloquially called a "tin" one, and the hand-built one made by the skilled coach-builder. While the former looks well for a short time, it soon proclaims its inferiority by its shabbiness and noise. So it is with clothes. The factory-made suit may look well at first, but after the lapse of a few months betrays its poor material, cheap trimmings, and inferior workmanship. Mass-production can never equal handicraft tailoring, and the product of the factory can never compare with the creation of the merchant tailors' work-room. —(Advt.)

CIVIL SERVANTS AND THEIR SALARIES.

THE COST OF LIVING BONUS.

At a meeting held in Jury's Hotel, Dublin, on Monday night, under the auspices of the Civil Service Federation, references were made to the recent Dail debate on the cost of living bonus.

Mr. P. Broderick, vice-chairman, who presided, stated that civil servants deeply regretted that the Dail had not thought fit to set up a Commission of Inquiry into the cost of living bonus. He felt that decision was reached because deputies did not fully appreciate the hardships and injustices inflicted by the existing system.

Mr. H. J. Smith (Taxes) referred to a statement made in the Dail that over 11,000 civil servants were in receipt of the full cost of living bonus. This, he pointed out, meant that all these people were in receipt of gross salaries, including bonus of £3 per week or less. Referring to the impending "cut" of two twenty-sixths, he stated that this would amount to about 3s. 6d. on a total remuneration of £3 per week, and the poorly-paid officials could not afford to lose this amount. Public opinion, he thought, would be in favour of the suspension of further "cuts" in the bonus of the lower grades

THE INDEX FIGURE.

Mr. M. J. Gallagher (Editor, Civil Service Journal) said that in the course of the Dail debate a great deal of attention had been given to the compilation of the index figure. Sufficient attention was not, however, drawn to the fact that its application to Civil Service salaries was, in the case of large numbers, most unsatisfactory. In the case of all remuneration in excess of 35s. per week, drastic reductions were made in the bonus which would be payable on the full application of the index figure. The Minister for Industry and Commerce had stated that, as a civil servant never enjoyed the benefit of any industrial boom, it was only equitable that he should be spared the rigours of industrial depression. The operation of the cost of living bonus system had now reached a stage where dire hardships and unforeseen injustices were being inflicted on numerous civil servants.

Mr. P. F. Walls (Taxes) said that the Government spokesmen apparently would regard it as a terrible state of affairs if Irish civil servants were in a better position in connection with the bonus than British civil servants. It was noticeable that the Department of Finance was always ready to quote British precedents when it suited its purpose, but when they favoured the staffs' claims civil servants were told that what happened in England was of no relevance.

THE CLAIM FOR ARBITRATION.

Mr. T. J. Hughes (Secretary, Civil Service Federation) said that in the course of the Dail debate stress had been laid upon the many advantages enjoyed by civil servants as compared with other workers. This was an attempt to prejudice the Service claim on the bonus. In their claim for arbitration they could not be more reasonable than they had shown themselves. Arbitration cut both ways. Civil servants could lose as well as win under it, and even where the arbitrator found in their favour they accepted the position that the Dail was free to reject the award. The money earned by civil servants was spent in the country and was used in bringing up good Irish citizens. There was an impression abroad that civil servants were people whom it was impossible to satisfy, and that they were always clamouring for improvements on already good conditions. That was not the case.

The further consideration of the matter was left over to a date to be arranged later.

THE "TIN" BODY AND THE "COACHBUILT" ONE.

Every motorist knows the immense difference in value between the motor body, colloquially called a "tin" one, and the hand-built one made by the skilled coach-builder. While the former looks well for a short time, it soon proclaims its inferiority by its shabbiness and noise. So it is with clothes. The factory-made suit may look well at first, but after the lapse of a few months betrays its poor material, cheap trimmings, and inferior workmanship. Mass-production can never equal handicraft tailoring, and the product of the factory can never compare with the creation of the merchant tailors' work-room. —(Advt.)

IRISH DERBY TO-DAY.

SEA SERPENT MAY PROVE BEST IN AN OPEN RACE.

THE Irish Derby to-day, if only attracting a field of six runners, promises to be a race of exceptional interest. The fact that Gallini has been sent from England to throw down a challenge to the pick of the Irish three-year-olds has given the race an importance which is reflected in the amount of discussion which has been heard as to the chances of the respective candidates. Sir E. Hanmer's colt finished fifth in the English Derby, and five or six of the horses

Tote Double on Third and Fourth Races.

behind him at Epsom have since won at Ascot. Many thought that with a little more luck he might have finished closer to the winner However, whatever was his luck on that occasion, there is no doubt that Gallini ranks high in the English three-year-old class, and his running to-day will be watched with the greatest interest The field will be made up made up as follows:—

DOUBLE ARCH, b. c., by Arch Gift—Twincat (Mr. J. T. Rogers) (scarlet, violet cap) (J. T. Rogers) 9st. 5lb.

GALLINI, b. c., by Spion Kop—Chicken Pie (Sir E. Hanmer) (primrose, dark blue collar and cuffs, dark blue cap with yellow spots) (Peacock). 8st. 12lb.

BEAUDELAIRE, ch. c., by Argosy—Morgan le Fey (Count McCormack) (red and gold halved, sleeves reversed, quartered cap) (More O'Ferrall). 8st. 12lb. ..... T. Burns

SEA SERPENT, ch. c., by Golden Myth—Seabloom (Mr. H. S. Gray) (scarlet, white belt) (Behan), 8st. 12lb. ..... Joe Canty

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, b. c., by Prince Galahad—Smoke Lass (Mr. J. H. H Peard) (silver grey, cerise cap) (Peard), 8st. 12lb. ..... A. Barrett

KNIGHT OF THE MIST, ch. c., by Knight of the Garter—Mountain Mist (Mr. W. J. Kelly) (navy blue, green hoop, navy blue sleeves and cap), (Behan), 8st. 12lb. ..... H. H. Beasley

Good judges of racing claim that staying ability is Gallini's strong point, and, if so, he will be better suited by the Curragh mile and a half than that of Epsom. Sea Serpent has also claims to be regarded as a genuine stayer; for it was only at the end of the Baldoyle Derby that he could assert any superiority over Beaudelaire. The latter had on that occasion to make his own running, which was doubtless against his chance, but to-day it will likely be Gallini who will set the pace, and the stable connections of Beaudelaire are confident that he will run a far better race. Double Arch has not run since winning the Irish Two Thousand Guineas, which race he won when it was thought that the conditions were dead against him. Sir Walter Raleigh has won two recent mile races in the easiest fashion, but in his case there is a doubt about his ability to stay the extra half mile, and the other runner, Knight of the Mist, who was third in the Scurry Plate yesterday, does not appear to be up to the class of the rest of the field. It is an extremely interesting race, and, while giving the vote to

GOSSIP FROM THE COURSE.

ATHERTON WINS EASILY.

DAY OF DOUBLES AT FOLKESTONE.

BLUE VISION MAY SCORE AT NEWCASTLE.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.
LONDON, Tuesday Night.

AGAIN Folkestone was favoured with sunny weather, and the Executive had another very good attendance. Walter Nightingall, who won a race on the opening day with Basra, was to the fore again, and this time he supplied a double in Mr. E. M. Hailey's Atherton and Mrs. Evelyn Rich's Silver Leaf. The Dover Handicap was a gift for Atherton, in spite of the 7lb. penalty he had gained at Gatwick, and he had no trouble in disposing of Knowl Bill. Atherton won races in the North as a two-year-old, and he was acquired out of Dobson Fearcok's stable at the December Sales. Mr. E. M. Hailey is a brother of Mr. Clarence Hailey, the head of the well-known bloodstock agency, and also proprietor of the Aston Stud, where Doctor Doolittle's half-brother, Kincardine, is standing.

ALPINE ROSE FAILS.

Silver Leaf is a half-sisted to that good horse, Silverstead, and she lost her maiden allowance in the Periosteum Plate, but she gave a very jady exhibition. The Birmingham winner, Alpine Rose, was a hot favourite, and she made a game show to get at Skysign and Silver Leaf, but the last-named, after making all the running, reached the winning post first.

John Beary won the Marsh Plate with his own filly, Miss Troy, who is by Orb, and he was also responsiuble for the training of Mrs. Edgar Wallace's Nestorian, who won the Folkestone Handicap. Michael Beary was the rider on each occasion, and may have been lucky on Nestorian, who was most fortunate in escaping the bumping which took place. Dusty was travelling in good style when he was put out of action inside the distance, and Forage Cap was tiring when he met with a similar fate. Norman Abbot made up a lot of ground to get second, and incidentally give Nestorian a race.

PENALTY DEFIED.

Miss Troy had to carry a 12lb. penalty in the Marsh Plate, and it was not surprising to find Witch Music the favourite, considering he had been runner-up in both his races. However, this light-framed gelding, who is by Scherzo, was not good enough, and Nautical was the one to fully extend Miss Troy.

Nautigal ran in Walter Earl's colours, and, after she has been sold with the late Mr. S. B. Joel's horses, Earl will set up as a public trainer. Mr. Dudley Joel is having a few horses in training with Earl, who should not lack for patrons after the success he has achieved at Moulton paddocks.

Major Hugh Peel won the Maiden Two-year-old Selling Plate with Order, whose price on the tote worked out at 217s. 9d. to 2s. After the race he was knocked down for 280 guineas to L. Hammond, on behalf of Mr. Bassett, but the auctioneer subsequently cancelled the sale. On the gelding being submitted once more he was bought in for 185 guineas, and will return to George Poole's charge.

Mercedes's only other race has been a successful one at Windsor, and he took the Stayers' Selling Handicap very easily. Young Rickaby, who rode him, has come to the front, and it is hoped he will continue to follow in his father's footsteps in every way.

SELECTIONS.

Racegoers in the South will move to Brighton for the next two days, and the Balcombe Stakes, the chief item, has cut up badly. The race should require little winning, and it may now be decided to run Invermark here in preference to the selling race. I think he should win, and only in his absence do I recommend Bill Sykes. If NUST produces her Hurst Park form behind Pharaoh or the Shoreham Maiden Plate should be a good thing for her; while ORBITE II. is my selection for the Southover Plate.

At Newcastle the Northumberland looks a reasonably good thing for BLUE VISION, if she displays the Ascot Stakes running, though Knight of Lorn will be well backed. AIR POCKET is my choice for the St. Oswald Plate, and DENBIGH for his selected race, which will probably be the Angerton Maiden Plate, in preference to the Monkchester Stakes.

NEWMARKET HINTS FOR TO-DAY.

We have more runners at Newcastle than at Brighton. Dahra and will contest the Gateshead Selling Handicap, and the latter should as nearly as possible win.

TAPROBANE,

who ran well in the Coventry Stakes at Ascot last week, should win the Mangerton Plate.

Roi des Aulnes, who takes part in the Northumberland Plate, does not appear to like racing. Blue Don showed by his success at Newbury that he is in good form. I am expecting to see a good race between Timber and Knight of Lorn. The former has been well trained for this event, and it is in his favour that he is running on a track suitable to his action. He will be a source of danger to who ran a good race against Parenthesis at Ascot.

PAUL PRY

is my selection for the St. Oswald Plate. He has done well since he finished second to Bute at York.

Mr. Anthony de Rothschild is running in the Gibside Selling Plate, and, as he is in receipt of a stone from Wearing a Crown, he may win.

GALLION'S REACH

Trincomali, Jenkins' Ear and

run for the Monkchester Stakes. The last-named has been some time coming to hand, but he has an excellent chance of winning this event.

At Brighton my fancies are:—2.0, Lion Heart; 2.30, Family Plate; 4.10, Sediranda (next best).

SPORTING GOSSIP.

Tote Double at Curragh.

Backers of Flashing Dawn and Ballyspellin for the tote double at the Curragh yesterday received dividends of 31s. 6d. There were sixty-nine winning tickets and the pool amounted to £121 5s. The total takings on the tote amounted to £866 17s.

Song o' My Heart for Sandown.

Count McCormack's Song o' My Heart has been sent to run for the Wellington Handicap at Sandown Park on Friday.

Petoni a Non-Runner.

Mr. D. J. Cogan's smart two-year-old has met with a slight accident, and will not be a runner in the Tyros Stakes at the Curragh to-morrow.

Mr. H. S. Gill and Captain C. Stafford have been elected members of the Turf Club.

HEATH STABLE IN FORM

TWO WINNERS FOR MAJOR DIXON AT THE CURRAGH.

THE Curragh June meeting, the most important fixture of the season in the Irish Turf headquarters, had a splendid send-off yesterday, when, under delightful weather conditions, some capital racing was witnessed, and it looks as if the Irish Derby, which will be the centrepiece of the second day's card, will attract a big crowd this afternoon.

The Flat Rath Handicap over the five furlongs course provided a very fine race, and was won by that useful mare, Flashing Dawn, under the big impost of 9st. 3lb. Mr. Donnelly's mare had not previously this season run quite up to her best form, but on this occasion she put in a remarkable performance Judging by the way the wagering went, it was regarded as an open race, and many horses' names were shouted as the likely winner, but when Gardner set about looking for his race on Flashing Dawn she came through with a great burst of speed to deprive Athlone Girl of the spoils by a matter of three-quarters of a length. Millennium, the recent purchase of the Hon. Mrs. Brindsley Plunkett, found the 7lb. penalty his undoing, but ran creditably and finished well up sixth.

ENNISTYMON DISAPPOINTS.

There was another fine finish for the Scurry Handicap, which Mr. L. J. Blake's Boy won from T.D. and Knight of the Mist. In doing so the winner appeared to be a bit lucky, and it was possibly due to the stronger riding of Wing that he got the better of T.D. Knight of the Mist will again be saddled for the Irish Derby to-day, the field for which will number six runners. A disappointing display was that of Ennistymon, the favourite, who never appeared with a winning chance.

Mr. John Kirwan, the County Kilkenny trainer, has certainly turned to good profit his purchase of Lord Burdon. The horse had already won for him a flat race and a hurdle race, and now upset calculations by defeating the odds-on favourite Hot Sun in the Stewards' Selling race. Hardly anything but Hot Sun was supported for the race, and those few who fancied Lord Burdon were able to secure the remunerative odds of 100 to 8. He still remains the property of Mr. Kirwan, having failed to elicit a bid when submitted to auction.

Molly Mog sadly disappointed her connections by her running in the Nursery Plate, in which she failed to finish in the first three. The race was won in easy style by Mr. H. J. Delaforce's Dilly Dally, a daughter of Diligence and Degna, trained like Boy at the Heath, Marylborough. Mr. Delaforce is a Londoner who has had horses trained at the Heath for some twelve years back, and he came over for yesterday's race and saw the first success gained by any of his horses in this country.

DEAD-HEAT FOR BALLYMANY STAKES.

Major Dixon had ample compensation for the failure of Molly Mog when Lisburn dead-heated with Spiora for the Ballymany Stakes, and Ballyspellin romped away with the Brownstown Plate. It was lucky that such a horseman as Joe Canty was in charge of Lisburn, for he proved a rare handful for even this expert rider, who had to use all his strength and artistry to get him up in the last stride to make the dead-heat. With Ballyspellin it was a different story, the daughter of Achtoi only requiring a slight rousing from Canty to go out and win as she likes. Details:—

TO-DAY'S BRIGHTON CARD.

ROSOLIO II. EXPECTED TO WIN BALCOMBE STAKES.

THE Balcombe Plate is the chief event on the card for the opening day at Brighton, and as weight does not count so much here as on other courses Lucky Tor, if saddled, must have a great chance. Nightingall will saddle a fancied candidate, and of his trio I have most fancy for Silver Mount. Cheerful Abbot usually runs well on this course, while Last of the Dandies is on the up grade, and Bill Sykes is fancied, but my selection must be Rosolio II.

Manto likes the Brighton course, and I expect him to go close in the Southover Plate. Rialto Bridge beat Fingle Bridge at Newbury, and is at his best over six furlongs, while Phonemeter will be much better for his outing at Birmingham. The best has not been seen so far this season of Welsh Dame, while Sediranda, if she has recovered from her hard race in the Wokingham Stakes, should go close. The track should suit her, but Manto is the selection.

GOLF

SURPRISE RESULTS.

DR. MacCORMACK AND R. SIMCOX BEATEN AT ROSSES POINT.

FROM OUR GOLF CORRESPONDENT.
ROSSES POINT, Tuesday Night.

SURPRISE followed on surprise to-day, when the second and third rounds of the Irish Close Amateur Championship were played. In the morning came the defeat of the much fancied Dr. MacCormack by the boy, Clifford McMullan, who is not yet out of his teens, but who has had a good deal of coaching by more than one of the English professionals. On the form which he showed in that match McMullan should have gone through the next round, but he succumbed to J. L. Crabbe in a remarkable finish.

Then came the elimination of Redmond Simcox by William Gill, who effected a splendid recovery from a serious position, to win at the nineteenth. It was a most interesting day's golf, played in varying conditions; for, although on the whole the weather was favourable, there were periods, especially in the evening, when a heavy mist made matters decidedly uncomfortable for competitors.

PROBABLE FINALISTS.

We have now reached the last eight and it has all the appearance of developing into a final between the holder, Sean Burke, and A. W. Briscoe, who are playing splendid golf. In the morning Briscoe beat W. F. French by 2 and 1, and when he finished required only a four for a 75. Burke, who gained a 4 and 3 victory over Sheals, of Balmoral, won every hole except four in bogey, and these four were all dykes. Thereby one can judge the quality of the golf they played. Crabbe is also putting up excellent golf, and is by no means out of it, and the fact that he is thoroughly familiar with the course, which is playing splendidly, is also a factor in his favour.

When I picked up Dr. MacCormack and Clifford McMullan at the fourth in the morning, the Belfast boy was one hole up, but when he pulled his tee shot to the short hole very wide it looked, even then early, as if he had shot his bolt. To the astonishment of those watching, however, the doctor got right under his shot, and had to pitch his second from the hollow in front of the green. He lost that hole, and also the fifth. Then came a partial recovery by MacCormack, and having squared at the tenth, he seemed set for victory. Not for the first time, however, he took liberties with the course on the way to the twelfth. It is not a course that even the cracks can flout with impunity. He apparently went for the carry over the bunker on the left and had to play his second out of the face of it. He failed to get out in one and lost the hole, which McMullan had in an excellent four. It was a question whether the youngster would keep it up, but though he showed signs of breaking when to the fifteenth he hit his second very short of the green, after the other had cut his second, he secured a half. A good three at the sixteenth left him dormy, and, MacCormack slicing his drive to the seventeenth into a very heavy lie, the end came, although again the prospect of victory was too much for the boy, who practically missed his third, but played a fine fourth, to hole a good putt for a half and the match.

WISDOM'S DEFEAT.

The elimination of O. J. O. Wisdom, who led the Dublin University teams to victory over this course in the Barton Shield and Junior Cup—by the way, Trinity had never won either trophy before—was accomplished by C. L. Donovan. The latter, who has extensive business interests in South America, and is of Irish parentage (his father and mother were born in Cork), learned his golf in America, and in six or seven years has worked down to a handicap of three at Addington and Portmarnock. A very steady player, he hits the ball beautifully and putts with accuracy. It was, perhaps, his putting that won for him this match, as in to other department of the game did he evince a superiority over the Trinity man, whose work on the greens was not as steady as usual. Once on the way out Wisdom was in the lead at the sixth, and again at the eleventh he was in front, but Donovan drew ahead at a critical stage, the sixteenth, and held his own in the play to the last two holes.

Two internationalists, A. W. Briscoe and W. F. French, had a splendid match to the seventeenth, where the West of Ireland golfer won. The golf was good all the way, but Briscoe had a little the better of a close struggle. One down at the ninth, French was on level terms at the twelfth, but from the fourteenth it went in favour of Briscoe, who clinched matters by becoming dormy one. At that point Briscoe required a four for a 75.

The big match of the evening was that in which Gill got the better of Simcox at the nineteenth, but the Portmarnock player had a narrow escape, taking 40 for the outward half. Simcox was one up at the half-way stage, and with seven to play was three to the good. Then came Gill's effort. He would have got level at the fifteenth, where Simcox cut his tee shot, but for the Cork man lofting a stymie, but he holed a chip at the seventeenth to wine out his arrears, and a fine putt at the nineteenth gave him a surprising victory.

McMULLAN GOES OUT.

Crabbe, a former holder of the West of Ireland Championship, was chipping and cutting beautifully in his match with McMullan, and, winning the fifth, sixth, eighth and ninth, he was in a very strong position at the turn, being then three up. He still held that lead going to the thirteenth, but then came a brilliant run by McMullan, who took three in a row in three, four, four. For the time being it seemed as if the tide had turned, but the Knock player made a mess of the short sixteenth, where he pulled his tee shot, chuffed his second, and lost the hole to a three. The other holes were halved in five and four, and thus McMullan passed out.

Cecil Lee won his two matches in the most convincing manner. In the morning Frank McConnell was brought to the nineteenth by J. D. Woods, who was dormy two, but lost the match by the sound putting of the Portrush player in a splendid finish.

HOLDER BEATEN IN SCOTTISH LADIES' CHAMPIONSHIP.

Mrs. A. Holm (Elie and Earlsferry), the holder, was beaten in the second round of the Scottish Ladies' Championship at Gullane yesterday. She had received a bye through the first stage. Putting weakly, she was defeated by Miss S. M. W. Millar (Gullane) by 2 and 3. Another interesting match in the second round was the meeting of Mrs. Hugh Percy, the former Scottish and Northumberland title holder, and Miss Gertrude Mitchel, a Scottish hockey international, and Miss Glover, a niece of the winner of the first Scottish championship twenty-eight years ago. Mrs. Percy won by 4 and 2.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

TONE AND COMMENT

DUBLIN FAIRLY STEADY.

GUINNESS STRONG.

There was nothing in the course of the Dublin Stock Market yesterday to suggest a continuance of the "boom" of Monday. On the contrary, there was a disposition to take profits, although the pressure was not severe, and before the close markets hardened.

Funds were firm, with Second Loan still rising. Kingstown Stock rose to 70, an improvement of 4½. The Banking section again made a good showing.

Among Breweries, Guiness Units were firmer all day and closed ninepence up at 100s. 7½d., the best marking, Castle Bellingham Ord. rose 1s. to 96s. On the basis of the last dividend, these shares return over £12 12s. per cent.

Rails were dull, with a fall of 1½ to 52 in Great Northern Guaranteed, the most prominent change. Southern Debs. were weak.

Among the Industrials, British-American Tobaccos were very strong, and rose 2s. 3d. to 77s., but Imperials were weaker and lost 10½d. Courtaulds and Unilevers were also off colour, but the falls were not severe. Imperial Chemicals fluctuated and closed unchanged, and Dunlops repeated their former price. The Woolworth premiums remained about Monday's levels.

LONDON QUIET.

SOME BRIGHT FEATURES.

Quieter conditions ruled in the London Stock Markets yesterday after the buoyant activity of Monday, and in several cases some of the earlier gains were lost, but bright features were not lacking, and the general tone remained firm. There was a tendency to await the decision of the French Government concerning Mr. Hoover's plan before marking international issues higher, and it was felt that the success of the plan depends in no small degree upon the attitude taken in Paris. Monday's activity in other markets had the effect of detracting attention from Gilt-edged Stocks, which have monopolised attention of late, and this showed itself yesterday, when most of the British Government Stocks finished easier, though generally the losses did not exceed small fractions. War Loan 4½ per cent. proved an exception with a rise of a point to 101¾. Australian Stocks were firmer, though there was no quotable rise. German 7 per cent. Stock lost a point, but other Foreign Bonds were firm. Home Rails had a disappointing day compared with Monday. There was no increase in business, and several of the Prefd. Stocks were lower, with the exception of North-Eastern 5 per cent. Prefd.-Ord., which added a fraction. Foreign Rails were irregular. Central Argentine Ord. rose 1½, and several others were from ½ to 1 higher; but San Paulo lost 2, and Cordoba Second Pref. shed a point. American Rails had another good day, with Union Pacifics 7 points up, and New York Central 3 higher. Industrials did not always hold the gains marked on Monday, but, as a rule, most of the appreciations were maintained. Breweries were steady, and there was talk of the coming Guinness distribution. The market expects a final dividend of 15 per cent. and bonus of 5 per cent. Cables and Wireless eased on the lower traffic receipts for May, and Crosse and Blackwell weakened on the passing of the Preference dividend. Mines showed a good tone, with some firm spots; and some Oil Shares improved.

THE INDUSTRIAL MARKET.

UNITED MOLASSES ACTIVE.

Although less animated conditions prevailed in the Industrial sections yesterday the general tone continued firm. The trans-Atlantic issues opened with a further burst of strength, but with professional operators on this side inclined to snatch profits, an irregular tendency developed. Afternoon advices from New York proved less encouraging at first, but later buying orders came to hand from that centre, and prices hardened in the "Street" dealings. United Molasses attracted attention, with buyers still in evidence after official hours in the "Street," where some bidding was reported for Dunlops, "Bats," and Imperial Chemicals.

After a firm opening the trans-Atlantic favourites were subject to a profit-taking, but they closed firm in the late dealings. Nickels finished at 15, after being 14 7/16 and 15½ and Radio Corp. at 18½, after 17½. Brazilian Tractions advanced at first to 19¼, gave way to 18¼, eventually improving to 18⅞. The "Record" leaders showed little variation.

Cables and Wireless Stocks reflected the traffic results. The Pref. lost a point at 57, and the "A" Ord. a similar amount at 15¼, with the "B" Ord. fractionally easier at 9¾. Globe Telegraph issues improved, the Ord. to 9 and the Pref. to 9¼. Canadian Marconis had buyers at 12s. 6d.

Motors gave a rather mixed display. Fords gained a modest fraction at 2½, and buyers also came forward for several others, but Guys weakened to 2s. 6d. on the report showing a loss of £186,000 for fifteen months.

Buyers were still in evidence for the leading Brewery and Tobacco shares. Distillers changed hands freely in anticipation of the annual results shortly, and finished 1s. higher at 49s. 3d. Allsopps further improved to 23s. 1½d. Barclay Perkins to 27s., and Watney Deferred to 50s. South African Breweries were also inquired for at 58s. 6d., and Guinness at 100s. 6d. The last named on expectations of the final dividend and bonus due next month being maintained.

In the Tobacco section, "Bats" further advanced to 3¾ bid, Carreras "A" to 4, and "Imps" to 4⅜.

Crosse and Blackwell Preference were marked down 9d. to 4s. 9d. on the passing of the dividend, and the Ord. eased 1½d. to 6d. Bovril Def. came into demand, and advanced ⅛ to 1⅜.

In the Rayon section, American Celanese Common closed firm at 2½, but Canadian Celanese eased to 1½, and Courtaulds to 27s., the last-named closing buyers at this level. British Celanese Ord. held at 4s. 6d., with the Second Pref. a few pence harder at 4s.

A moderate inquiry was reported for some of the Shipping shares. P. and O. Defd. were prominent with a rise of 1s. 6d. to 25s., while Cunards improved 1s. 3d. to 9s. 9d., and Furness-Withy 6d. to 24s. 6d.

United Molasses were again active and higher, the final quotation leaving them 1s. 3d. up at 9s. in the "street." The Distillers results are expected to be issued at the end of the week, and, in view of the association between the companies, it is thought possible that the report may contain some information regarding the position of Molasses. Imperial Chemicals touched 15s. 1½d. at first, then reacted to 14s. 6d., and finished at 14s. 9d. bid. Dunlops moved within narrow limits. They were finally buyers at 17s. 9d. Swedish Match "B" declined ¼ to 11, after improving in the early dealings to 11¼. Kreuger and Toll left off unaltered, after touching 18⅜ and 18¼. Among recent issues, Woolworths were easier, the Ord. being 9d. premium and the Pref. 10½d. premium.

OIL SHARES UNSTEADY.

As was to be expected, a reaction took place in Oil Shares yesterday, though in most cases the majority of the preceding day's rises were held. There were buyers in the market at the commencement of business, and prices, especially of the leading issues, further advanced. A set-back occurred after a short time, however, many dealers taking quick profits. Business dwindled during the course of the day, and the market closed with an unsteady appearance.

RUBBER SHARES BETTER.

With the price of the commodity firmer, and more buyers than sellers in the market, Rubber Shares showed a better tone, and in several cases appreciable gains were marked. Java Amal. rose 2s. 6d., United Sua Betong 1s. 3d., Rubber Trusts 6d., Linggi 7½d., Anglo-Dutch 9d., and Batu Tiga 9d. There were several other gains, florin shares often being the turn harder.

THE MONEY MARKET

CAPE GOLD FOR THE BANK.

A sharp relapse in silver prices was the outstanding feature in the Money Market yesterday. As a result of heavy selling from India and China, silver prices were fixed ⅛d. lower at 13½d. for spot and 13⅞d. per ounce for forward delivery. The market closed with a weak tendency.

In Lombard street money was in rather better supply, with borrowers obtaining fresh balances until to-day at 1½ per cent.

Business in bills was again restricted, but the tone was slightly easier in sympathy with money. For three months' bank bills 2 1/16 per cent. was scarcely an effective working rate, while the hot Treasury Bills were dealt in down to 2 per cent.

Of the £650,000 of Cape gold available in the market, roughly £72,000 was taken on home and Continental account, the balance remaining available for purchase by the Bank of England. The price of gold was fixed 1d. lower at 84s. 10½d. per fine ounce.

At the bank £1,056,351

LONDON MINING MARKET FIRM.

KAFFIRS WELL SUPPORTED.

The Mining Market kept firm throughout, Kaffirs generally again gave quite a good ent of themselves. The report of the ting of the Union Corporation created a d impression and induced a demand for shares, which left off higher. Of the Finance descriptions, Central Mining supported and moved up, and nies" were again a strong spot. While Rhodesian department could hardly be ified as active, there was a certain unt of business in progress, with buyers minating. Chartered left off below the though still showing an improvement the day. In the Diamond section there a little investment demand for De Beers and the prices advanced, but the Ord. subject to profit-taking and lost the The price of tin rose sharply at one time, but fell back later, and left off 7s. 6d. down on balance at £107 15s. There was not a great deal of actual trading in the shares, but in view of the fact that floating supplies are in most cases very limited, it needed but a few inquiries to put prices better. In the West African department, Ashanti Goldfields were subject to profit-taking, and left off lower on the day. Among Australians, Lake View and Star were being nibbled at on rumours of good developments, but they were not quotably altered, while Wiluna were in demand and higher. The firmness of Copper led to further "bear" covering in Tintos, and the price rose at one time to 19. but selling then set in and a relapse of £1 occurred, leaving the quotation below the overnight's level. Closing prices:—

CORPORATION MARKET, DUBLIN.
Auction Sales daily Empties Supplied.—(Advt.)

DUBLIN POULTRY.—Poultry supplies continue good, and quite equal to demand, last day's top prices being freely paid, and market cleared early of all well-handled lots. The oppressive weather is having a serious effect on dead fowl, except they are well handled and gutted. Best chickens, 1/- to 1/3 lb.; smalls, 1/6 to 2/-; boilers, large, fat, 2/6 to 3/- each; others, 1/- to 2/-; ducklings, large, fatted, 3/- to 4/- each; stores, 1/6 to 2/6; old, 6d. to 1/-; rabbits, best, 1/- to 1/2 each; graziers, large, fresh, 6d. to 1/- each; and smalls 3/- to 6/- per doz.

DUBLIN BUTTER AND EGG.—Butter supplies continue to increase, and grades are now plentiful. Trade, however, has turned quiet, both local and cross-Channel, and market is the turn weaker. Heavy supplies of farmers' parcels on offer, for which demand was quiet, except for real choice lots, which maintained late rates. No inquiry for factory butter, owing to price, which continue to clear in comparison to creamery. Best creame 95/lb., 1/- to 1/04 per lb.; 28lbs., 1/03; farmers' best, 9d. to 9½d.; extra, 10d.; inferior from 8½d lb. downwards. Egg market is without change except that duck eggs are cheaper, and market turned very slow for same. Many complaints are being heard of stale and musty eggs, and dealers would require to exercise a lot more care about what they buy. Supplies, although not heavy, are quiet sufficient for demand. Some senders are asking more money, but market conditions do not warrant any advance on the following:—Extra 16 and 17lb. grades, 9/4 to 10/-; ordinary and selected, 8/- to 8/9; medium, 7/3 to 7/8; smalls, etc., 6/ to 6/6; and ducks 7/9 to 8/3 per 120.

CORK BUTTER.—Market continues quiet. Demand steady; prices unchanged. Creameries, 112/- per cwt.

DUBLIN FISH.—Market heavily supplied with all classes, particularly salmon and grilse, of which, owing to heated conditions of most arrivals, sales- men found it rather difficult to make a clearance at much cheaper prices. Sales on the whole were poorly supported and slow sell up of the following:—220 boxes from two steam trawlers, 70 packages salmon, 14 chests lobster, 50 packages herrings, and a good demand from country and local senders. Salmon, 1/- to 1/3 lb.; grilse, 8d. to 9d.; lobsters, 20/- to 25/- per 13 large; medium, 10/- to 12/6; small, 6/- to 7/6; soles, 25/- to 30/- per 9 pairs large, medium, 10/- to 15/-; slips, 2/6 to 5/-; turbot, 6d. to 8/- each; brill, 6d. to 5/- each; herrings, 15/- to 22/6 box; plaice, small and large, 15/- to 60/- per half box; cod and codling, 15/- to 50/-; whiting, small and large, 10/- to 50/-; ling, 15/- to 17/6; ray, 12/6 to 17/6; hake, small and large, 17/6 to 78/-; pollock, 15/- to 20/-; conger eels, 10/- to 15/-; and white soles, 25/- to 40/-.

DUBLIN POTATO.—Few factors are now handling old crop, and where found prices are 8/- per cwt. New crop in fair supply, and a satis- factory clearance made at cheaper rates, namely, Epicures 15/- per cwt., and Queens 16/- cwt.

BILLINGSGATE FISH.—Soles, also slips, 16d to 22d., lobsters 15d. to 21d., salmon, English, 19d. to 20d., Scottish 20d. to 22d., Irish 18d. to 19d. per pound; live eels 15/- to 35/-, dead 12/- to 28/-; draught; turbot 7/- to 9/-, plaice 6/- to 12/-, halibut 12/- to 14/-, lemon soles 8/- to 12/-, cod 3/- to 5/-, hake 5/- to 8/-, skate wings 3/ to 5/-, haddocks 2/- to 6/- per stone.

MANCHESTER MEAT.—Home-killed beef sides, 9d. to 10½d.; lambs, 1/2 to 1/3; best hoggs, 11d.; ewes, 7d.; chilled hindquarters, 41d. to 64d.; forequarters, 1½d. to 2½d.; frozen beef, hind- quarters, 2½d. to 3½d.; crops, 2½d. to 2½d.; fore- quarters, 1½d.; mutton, wethers 4½d. to 4½d., ewes 4d. to 4½d.; lambs, 6d. to 7½d.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DUBLIN HAY AND STRAW.—Hay supply again on the small side, but proved sufficient for all requirements, there being few buyers in attendance. Real choice hay was very scarce, and the few loads on offer made 5d. per cwt., more than last day; otherwise values were unchanged, with inferior classes rather hard to cash. There was a sprinkling of new hay offered, but met a disappointing sale at 2/- per cwt., condition of same being poor, in fact a little better than grass. Choice 1st crop, 5/- to 5/3, extra 5/6 per cwt.; 2nd and 3rd crop, 4/3 to 4/6, extra 4/9; old meadow, 3/6 to 4/-; other classes 2/6 to 3/3. Straw supply light, for which there was a fair demand.
